Communicating by way of those category 5+ storms, 9+ earthquakes and mega volcanoes seems to get my attention. GW and AGW just seems to be the icing on the cake.

btw; Our Eden has been shrinking as it cools, as well as losing mass.

"Uhhmmm," the 2-to-1 LANDSLIDE by which American-born Obama defeated the republican candidate who was born in Panama.

You sound like an idiot. Welcome to my woodshed.

> He barely won.

2-to-1 is not "barely," fuzznuts. Back to the short bus with you.

> In your opinion can > anyone disagree with his policies without being racist?

Of course, many do. I disagree with some of them. I think for instance that he has been way too bipartisan and that has cost him.

You are racist however if you demand his birth certificate\. Why?
Several reasons. First, he fuckin' released it three years ago while still a candidate. Nevertheless you racist nutbags ignore that and continue to beat your breasts claiming he didn't. Yet he is the FIRST and ONLY presidential candidate in our nation's history ever to document his eligibility. Second, you never asked to see the birth certificate of any white presidents. Only the black one. Ipso fuckin' facto, idiot.

Indeed, there isn't any doubt. There is only rank denial and phony outrage from you racist loons. That's not doubt....

Actually yes, it was and there's nothign you can do about it.

We can also state that you're an outright fuckin' LIAR of course as I proved, since of course I made no such claim. I did NOT call people who simply had a hunch or opinion or feeling or belief that he might

If you are speaking of the earth losing mass, how could it possibly do so?

All I am aware of is the earth gaining mass though cosmic dust, asteroids, meteoroids, comets, etc. which end up falling prey to our gravity which constantly "collects" more mass! And, the more mass it collects, the faster it is able to collect more (greater gravity.)

I am aware of no mass being able to escape the gravitational well of earth, other than our spacecraft ...

So you are going to CONTINUE to be a short-bus rider by failing at reading comprehension? Is THAT your final answer?

Hint: As you yourself ADMITTED TO LYING, he did NOT claim that UBL was dead. Now you are BACTRACKING on the only honest admission you have made? BWAHAAAHAAAAHAHAHAAAA!!! I have to admit, you are the most stupid kook I have bashed in quite some time!

Aha!! So once aganin you are swinging back to my side and ADMITTING that he DID NOT CLAIM UBL was dead byut only proposed a guess, a speculation, an OPINION.

I've been suggesting that, as your hero Bush would say, you "edjumacate" yourself on the differences between asserting a claim and stating an opinion. You might spare the need for me to kick your stupid kooker ass.

> which in the absence of a corpus delecti is the > same thing.

It is not even close to the same thing. Stating a claim would cross the line between opinion and factual assertion. I understand that to someone as dense as you who constantly fabricates and lies, they seem like the same but to people with what we like to call "brains," they are not.

By you.

It is simply FACT that people stating an opinion are not stating a factual claim but asserting their GUESS.

Gawd, but you're a stupid one. Is it from a lifetime of sniffing glue or from a lifetime of being a rightarded moron?

When he expressed his "opinion" in 2009, after Obama took office, that UBL most probably was dead? I didn't see an actual claim from him. You're good at finding things that aren't there... why don't YOU try? BWAHAAHAAAHAHAHAHA!!

Incidentally, he does seem to be one of your fellow rightards so perhaps he IS a moron twoofer. Does he believe Bush blew up the twin towers too? <snicker>

Your statement in itself is a lie. You cannot point to one single word of mine that is a lie whilst I have exposed every single one of your statements as fatally flawed. You have ONLY lied.

More dancing away by you, in your complete and utter inability to point to one single thing I have said that is a lie, while I have been proving all of your statements to be lies. Hint: Your desperation is palpable.

Yep.

Uh, moron. Clue? Hint:

"Believed..."

There's that troublesome word again that proves you wrong.

They did NOT say that he was dead. they stated their OPINION.

They did NOT make the factual assertion that he was dead.

You DID admit you were wrong and it seems you're too stupid even to know it.

> > He was guessing.

> Nope, a "guess" is an uneducated speculation.

"Speculation."

Look it up, shit-for-brains.

> The people I listed were educated analysts.

Stating a belief and opinion but not making factual assertions.

I know that you want ever so much for this to be different but no amount of repeated assertion by you will ever change an opinion to a fact.

Opinion. Not making a factual assertion.

Turns out his opinion was wrong, on top of it.

He does seem to be, like you, a rightard however.

> >> So we can say he was "probably" wrong.

No we don't. It is proven historical fact. Denial is not doubt, sweetums.

Which is an opinion and nothing more. you jeep stating this but it will never become a factual assertion.

> His claim was totally unambiguous.

His opinion was not a claim. His look at available evidence led him to "opine" that UBL was "probably dead." That does not even come CLOSE to making the flat out assertion that UBL was dead at the time.

He was certainly entitled to his opinion. Note however that it turns out he was wrong.

correct.

Correct, it's an unambiguous statement of OPINION, not fact.

Since I have never been "trapped," this is yet one more proof of your insanity. I won. ALl of my claims are clearly spelled out and proven fact. None of them can be refuted by your fabrications and lies.

"Payroll?" WTF? I am retired and a grandmother amusing myself by making sport of insane nut jobs like you. You provide more daily comedy gold than watching Maury. Kooks like you make it easy for people like me to get jollies out of insulting your stupid kooker asses.

Of the two choices, DEAD or ALIVE...

Which one did he make?

Again:

Bin Laden 'probably' dead

The US Federal Bureau of Investigation's counter-terrorism chief, Dale Watson, says he thinks Osama bin Laden is "probably" dead.

(Moron twoofer?)

http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-1212851/Has-Osama-Bin-Laden-dead-seven-years--U-S-Britain-covering-continue-war-terror.html

The theory first received an airing in the American Spectator magazine earlier this year when former U.S. foreign intelligence officer and senior editor Angelo M. Codevilla, a professor of international relations at Boston University, stated bluntly: 'All the evidence suggests Elvis Presley is more alive today than Osama Bin Laden.'

(Moron twoofer?)

There are other doubters, too. Professor Bruce Lawrence, head of Duke University's religious studies' department and the foremost Bin Laden expert, argues that the increasingly secular language in the video and audio tapes of Osama (his earliest ones are littered with references to God and the Prophet Mohammed) are inconsistent with his strict Islamic religion, Wahhabism.

(Moron twoofer?)

This week, still more questions have been raised with the publication in America and Britain of a book called Osama Bin Laden: Dead or Alive?

Written by political analyst and philosopher Professor David Ray Griffin, former emeritus professor at California's Claremont School of Theology, it is provoking shock waves - for it goes into far more detail about his supposed death and suggests there has been a cover-up by the West.

The book claims that Bin Laden died of kidney failure, or a linked complaint, on December 13, 2001, while living in Afghanistan's Tora Bora mountains close to the border with Waziristan.

His burial took place within 24 hours, in line with Muslim religious rules, and in an unmarked grave, which is a Wahhabi custom.

Probably dead isn't the same as a statement he IS dead.

Please try to distinguish between opinion, possibilities, and statements of known fact.

He didn't say Osama was dead. He didn't claim to know Osama was dead. He simply expressed his opinion that he was assuming that Osama was probably dead.

What part of "probably" do you think doesn't allow the possibility that Osama is or rather was, in fact, alive?

All you're doing is making yourself look stupid. Probably is NOT conclusive.
Probably is NOT a statement that he knows positively the status. Your attempt to make it into more than it is simply illustrates your desire to bend, twist, distort, deny and ignore what actually was said in favor of your own personal agenda and views.

In short, the only person making the assertion he WAS dead...is you, and you're clearly wrong.

Diety? Same circle? Again? Isn't "deity" the equivalent of "God?"

You are a compete loon whose absorption with religion has driven you nuts!

Einstein acknowledges a creator, I don't see much difference between the powers of a creator and the powers of a God (or, deity, for that matter), as far as the difference in powers/abilities go, I have no interest. It just has NO bearing on the discussion of hard physics.

Now, as to external beliefs in the interactions of such a creator or God with humans, A RELIGION, I don't care of your relationship, nor, even if you have one, real or false, or not! And, what the hell powers you ascribe to "God", or not, matters not, to me or this discussion -- but here your moronic text keeps circling!

You jump in here with a total focus on matters of religion (bible, Jesus, catholic, jew, etc., etc., etc.) and attempt every trick you can to put words into someones mouth, attempt to determine what religious beliefs they have, etc., and even go so are as to postulate that this is valid in what we were chatting about before you stuck your religious-focused-arse in here!

Gee, do we see that strawman arguments are your weapon of choice? ROFLOL

In any public forum I have entered, you would be thrown out on your religious focused arse! It is generally accepted only morons would be so crass and full-of-themselves, and that you would BE EXPECTED to holster your personal beliefs and rants from such ... and carry on in a sane manner with the use of logic.

How many times must you be told that religious arguments are immaterial here? That your belief, or not, in a personal God has NO relevance here, nor anyone elses'!

You are the only one who is unaware of your insanity, or the delusion that your actions are not insane, fix it!

How are you now attempting to bend what I have stated? The ether will have the properties we find, when we are able to find them ...

The Michaelson-Morley experiment assumed that the earth rotation and properties who NOT influence their experiment, I pointed out that there is good reason that is false, and that their experiment may have failed from its' very design, re-look at the SHORT text of the URL I gave you, it is not overwhelming!

If you are a child, grow-up, if you are that petty an adult, GIVE UP!

You need to maintain focus on the proofs you have to offer, and the lack of them, and not depend on religion and personal attacks to prove your logic and reason ... if you have no experts, no scholars, no scientists which hold your beliefs, and have put their works to paper, provide your own paper!

Do something other than maintaining a focus on religion, personal opinions, guesses, visions, rants, personal attacks, strawman arguments, etc.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Voice of America operator plans "sunset" for shortwave radio broadcasts

The sun is setting on Voice of America's shortwave radio service, heard worldwide in dozens of languages for 70 years.

A strategic technology plan prepared by the Broadcasting Board of Governors (BBG), the federal agency responsible for Voice of America, Alhurra, Radio Free Asia and other international stations, concludes that it should end many shortwave broadcasts in favor of "more effective" media such as internet radio.

I can't believe they use this excuse to close down so many shortwave services. There are three primary reasons why internet streaming radio cannot replace shortwave services:

1) Target areas for shortwave services do not have access to internet.

2) Even if they DO have internet access, it's severely restricted by governments.

3) The average person that cares at all to listen to them in the free, developed world usually does so just because they CAN, without having to pay for the privilege, or just for the excitement of listening to something coming from half a world away without wires.

and, just for fun, this additional tidbit:

You STILL can't take streaming radio with you reliably.

Nope, proven wrong. Hawaii certified it. By very definition, it cannot be "photoshopped." You throw that word around like you know what it means, but really, you're a moron. You onl;y repeat the lies your racist masters have fed you.

The birth certificate is real and the Constitution requires you to accept it.

It is not altered. You are altered.

You have nothing. The case is closed. In fact, there never was a case since Obama was the FIRST and ONLY presidential candidate in US history to fully document that he meets the eligibility requirement.

Even if this were true, as it is always said, "follow the money trail." Alleged "organizations" and governmental departments are now constantly trying to steer public thought in the direction they want it to go. The reality is that there are new short wave stations sprouting up all the time. However, there are special interest groups that deeply want to convince the brain-dead to abandon that which is already paid for to buy the newest gadgets. The simple fact is that worldwide there are millions of short wave listeners who are under 25, over 25 and it remains viable and useful. Painting the whole world by what some industrialized, capitalistic countries are doing is absurd. The world is a big place but our arrogance often convinces us that we're the only ones on the righteous path.

To believe anything else is just "drinking the Kool Aid" and convincing yourself that the only alternative is to rush to Best Buy and buy the newest thing that will enable the government to easily monitor what you're listening to and censor that as well is what they want.

No, naysayers...short wave radio will be around for a long time. There are too many honest governments and non-governmental entities that do not want to give up the ability to reach people without borders, firewalls, scanning software, search software and all the other figments of oppression that we once were proud of Radio Free Europe (we thought) for dissolving. Mobility and convenience of terrestrial radio is superior over anything offered by "hot spots", waiting on buffering and clunky non-ergonomic devices like computers or handheld crap with buttons the size of most politician's brains.

As for the under-25s...what boneheads. You're always a bonehead when your under 25 which is why they pitch to this group because kids will rush out and buy anything. It's not until your older than 25 that you figure out it's all a con game by the fat titted old men who run everything that they're shaking you down for as much money as they can.

Even if this were true, as it is always said, "follow the money trail." Alleged "organizations" and governmental departments are now constantly trying to steer public thought in the direction they want it to go. The reality is that there are new short wave stations sprouting up all the time. However, there are special interest groups that deeply want to convince the brain-dead to abandon that which is already paid for to buy the newest gadgets. The simple fact is that worldwide there are millions of short wave listeners who are under 25, over 25 and it remains viable and useful. Painting the whole world by what some industrialized, capitalistic countries are doing is absurd. The world is a big place but our arrogance often convinces us that we're the only ones on the righteous path.

To believe anything else is just "drinking the Kool Aid" and convincing yourself that the only alternative is to rush to Best Buy and buy the newest thing that will enable the government to easily monitor what you're listening to and censor that as well is what they want.

No, naysayers...short wave radio will be around for a long time. There are too many honest governments and non-governmental entities that do not want to give up the ability to reach people without borders, firewalls, scanning software, search software and all the other figments of oppression that we once were proud of Radio Free Europe (we thought) for dissolving. Mobility and convenience of terrestrial radio is superior over anything offered by "hot spots",
waiting on buffering and clunky non-ergonomic devices like computers or handheld
crap with buttons the size of most politician's brains.

As for the under-25s...what boneheads. You're always a bonehead when your under 25 which is why they pitch to this group because kids will rush out and buy anything. It's not until your older than 25 that you figure out it's all a con game by the fat titted old men who run everything that they're shaking you down for as much money as they can.

Lastly, the Voice of America ceased being of any interest to listeners many years ago when it adopted its new "Board of Governors" mission.

I am in very strong agreement with what you say, you make excellent point.

There are a thousand other things, and worthless ones, which I would see cut before ever touching SW. Aid to foreign countries is but one ... just cutting the "welfare payments" to israel would give us a nice sum to spend on SW ... getting out of the UN would be another way ... countless ways, when you look, really ...

Same old song we heard with BBC.

Isn't anymore true now than it was then.

But, remember, these broadcasts are both political in origin and often propagandist in nature.

Given the current tone, both in Washington and worldwide, that they would be ending the most direct, and most portable, methods of dissemination is hardly a surprise.

Hello dxAce

Radio Nederland Wereldomroep (Radio Netherlands World Service, http://www.rnw.nl/english ) also has to deal with financial cuts.
They will "change focus".

According to the latest plans, this means they will virtually end transmissions in Dutch, but continue transmissions to areas where freedom of press isn't in the dictionary.

Helium (4He) loss is the primary culprit, although H2 and a few other atomic dissociated elements of low mass have to be getting blown away by the soar winds that are being less deflected because of the ongoing demise of our geomagnetic protective force that losing roughly .1% per

That's the mainstream FUD-master interpretation that's K12 textbook status-quo, that doesn't hold up under proper physics and best available science. The notion of gaining mass might have been true within the first couple billion some odd years when there was a thousand percent more cosmic and local debris, as well as the geomagnetic force was at least ten fold stronger and our atmosphere was worth near 100 bar.

Where do you think all the 4He element that doesn't bind with anything (not even to itself) is going?

Then you know little if anything about the trail of elements leaving our planet and moon.
http://sirius.bu.edu/moontail/http://sirius.bu.edu/planetary/moon.html
http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/363105.stm

That's roughly a conservative volume of 5e29 cm3 of ionized Na, and if given an average vapor density of just 10 Na per cm3 = 5e30 Na atoms that weigh 3.818e-26 kg = 1.9e5 kg.

You obviously haven't noticed or given any credit as to this 900,000 km trailing cloud of considerable sodium(Na) tonnage that's solar wind driven away from our moon. Na has an atomic molecular mass of 23, whereas 4He has only an atomic mass of 4, so there's no way that element of 4He is going stay within our combined gravity well when the likes of Na can get solar blown away from our physically dark moon, because there's just not enough gravity unless the electrostatic force is somehow assisting.

Obviously your closed mindset that desperately wants believe that our faith-based government agencies never obfuscate, fib or lie to us. Considering the substantial mess they've gotten us into, and the near dysfunctional nature of our NASA, how well has that faith in our government been working out?

This would probably work. It will still get to the people for whom Yeah, that sounds about right. The day I listened they were having a Top Ten contemporary Christian music countdown, pretty nice show.

Spanish language, but EE songs :-) Their approach is nice - it's a soft sell message with hope for troubled young people and none of the "us vs. them" mentality of most other broadcasters. Same with AWR - good inspirational programs.

I ascribe no such properties to the vacuum; the properties are those of EM radiation, which requires no medium for propagation; in fact, any such medium, from air to glass, slows the apparent velocity of such radiation. Only in a vacuum is it equal to c. You seem to consistently miss this point.

Perhaps you should read his words again so you could begin to understand that the "gravitational ether" was a convenient way to think of the deformation of spacetime by matter and energy, not a physical medium such as was demonstrated to be nonexistent by Michaelson and Morley (and others). And this is neither a tangent nor a circle; it's the heart of the matter.

Correct. And unlike organized religion, science has no problem with admitting lack of knowledge, or with research to discover reality.

Those elements of thorium and uranium within Earth keeps making more helium, not that 24 to 26% of our planet wasn't helium to start with (say 1.5e24 kg).

The much thicker original atmosphere and the ten fold or greater geomagnetic force that contributed to this planet as having a much greater protective magnetosphere, with a sun that wasn't nearly as unstable as it is right now, not to mention for the initial 99.99999% of our supposedly 4.5 billion year old planet as having existed that didn't have us humans forcibly extracting and releasing all that helium, is probably why it's only as of somewhat recent times that Earth is losing so much of its helium.

You do understand that I interpret we didn't have that moon until somewhat recently, so you'll have to figure in whatever a global modulation force of 2e20 N is also going to our mostly fluid planet.

You do understand that our geomagnetic force has been dropping off by .1%/year?

change that.

Einstein considers it un-ponderable, he claims to NOT understand the properties of ether, he indicates, at this present time, we can attempt to observe how in "interacts" with our matter to deduce its' properties.

However, without a doubt, its' ability to support the propagation of light (and therefore RF) is a given fact ...

You simply attempt to stick your ideas, visions, opinion of what ether is and have Einstein take the blame for it.

And, an excellent example of the tangents and circle you navigate with your spin-doctoring ...

It is both my opinion and observation that there is some kinda of interaction with ether and metal antennas (and other conductive substances, elements.) It is here that RF "rings" the ether and begins the propagation of the RF wave/particles ... the experts approach this is a much more subtle manner than the words I choose.

Again, I tied "deity" to "creator" and "God", and took it for granted I would be speaking who are rooted in reality ...

If the set of false-pseudo-deities are thrown in, we are back again to your attempting to go out on tangents and run back to the same religious focus at the center of most of your post ...

Correct, and Einstein never said that, and I never thought he did ...

Einstein accepts that a "creator" did it ... and that for some, the properties of a "creator" and "God" make some sort of difference as to how the construction of the universe would have occurred -- I GUESS! <scratches-head>

Can we honestly believe Big Energy or their puppet government is ever going to admit as to how much helium they've exposed and/or having released?

Why do you think they were all so gosh darn pleased that our spendy OCO mission got foiled?

They don't even tell us the whole truth about their gas and oil wellhead volumes of natural gas that only contains a significant portion as methane, whereas much of that volume is leaked, vented, blowout released as well as being directly utilized by their own industry and/or surplus flared-off along with multiple other raw gasses including helium that doesn't bind with anything or burn unless you've got some kind of fusion process that primarily needs 3He.

We really need to do some basic research and apply a little math in order to accomplish deductive reasoning before we shrug off the global loss of helium as being insignificant, because it really isn't.

It's not that our government lies to us all the time, whereas instead they simply exclude/obfuscate as to anything that's upsetting or challenging to their mainstream status-quo, followed up by an army of mostly public funded FUD-masters that'll topic/author stalk in order to give the likes of you and me a serious run for our money for suggesting their Einstein wasn't a cloaked version of God.

Your interpretation of ether may be a very sore spot of exposed Einstein nerves, that makes them sweat bullets just thinking any outsider (especially a non-Semite) could have a better theory and logic to boot. In other words, they can't afford to allow one revision of anything to slip through, because that might suggest perhaps others (god forbid) could do the same.

With trillions upon trillions of photons existing within any given ISM or IGM cm3 at any given time has got to suggest an ether or matrix of some kind. A given m3 might suggest 1e12^8 photons because those all-inclusive photons are coming through any given m3 from all directions at the same time.

I only use google for one reason, it provides the best results.

startpage.com is a page which claims to "make anonymous" and sanitize your searches ... it is just a layer added to google, the results are googles.

They are all available though not a obvious as they should be, as I've pointed out so many times over the years.

You certainly don't have to believe my interpretation of the existing data and science, but then you can do your own math as based upon the best available data that'll begin to tell you how much helium is typically in raw natural gas, as well as what has been quantified as coming naturally out of Earth in order to sustain our atmospheric 5.24 ppm of 4He is not insignificant.

Otherwise if you elect to only believe or trust anything having the NASA and Big Energy stamp of approval, never mind.

I'll have to post a full topic on the mass that's leaving Earth in order to do justest to this science and deductive interpretation that'll suggest as to how much mass our planet is losing. Your independent interpretation would be a good thing, so I really shouldn't be telling you what or how to look for this stuff.

I've been known to be wrong from time to time, although on this I'm probably being conservative.

Google is just a Vehicle on "The Road" of News, Information and Knowledge . . .

"The Road" Starts with your ISP :
YOUR "ISP" IS YOUR 'GATE KEEPER'

Everything You Do : Everywhere You Go Goes Through Your ISP : Your ISP Knows Everything About You and Can Control You.

Listen to an Internet Radio Station
Go-To 'Visit' a Web-Site
Open a/o Post an eMail
Turn Your Computer-On or Off
YOUR ISP KNOWS and Tracks It [.]
=isp=knowing=censorship=control=you=

-where-as- Buy an AM/FM/SW Radio and Just Listen
NO ISP REQUIRED = NO TRACKING = NO CONTROL

Links = search for, as in do it yourself because you'll obviously never believe anyone else unless they are each NASA approved to begin with.

Why is it whenever it's not your idea or initial interpretation to begin with, that you assume the other guy is a liar and/or just making everything up?

Are you suggesting there is not 5.24 ppm of 4He in our atmosphere?

Are you suggesting that 4He is a very sticky kind of element that'll cling to our gravity well?

Do you have anything mainstream objective on your ether? (if not you must be a liar)

As I said, I'll post a specific topic in order to go over this old stuff that apparently is all brand new to you, because you only want to believe whatever NASA or any other government agency Big Energy cartel/cabal has to say, even if it's a well proven lie doesn't seem to matter once your K12 education made you believe whatever our NASA or government interpreted or decided to promote in spite of other valid science.

Well, actually, the ww2, ww3, etc. are known as server mirrors, and what they "are" or "look like" is completely up to the admin of the domain(s.) These sub-domains can be as innocuous as simply backup or load balancing ... but, easily used for "hiding data in plain sight."

The bushkultie can't recognize much less understand them,
but they remain nonetheless.

The glaring errors of the NIST 9/11 fiasco remain undisputed.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

"I would like to assure the world that I did not plan the recent attacks, which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons," bin Laden's statement said."

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

Notice that the bushkultie must ignore this fact, too.

Of course you hate America when you insist that those who murder Americans should not be prosecuted
according to the rule of law.

admissible evidence against the scapegoat chosen

The bushkultie has no admissible evidence, and doesn't even know what it is.

You always do.

The bushkultie doesn't believe in actual admissible evidence.

The bushworshipper is so uncivilized as to prefer assassinations to trials.

It's not difficult to fool a bushkultie.

The bushworshipper has been tricked repeatedly.

The bushkultie is pitied, while a useful example.

The bushkultie is a mere dupe.

The bushworshipper was fooled easily by faked videos.

Others could see the discrepancies quite clearly.

The real perps were 'incompetent' all the way to their offshore accounts.

The claim of "incompetence" is ludicrous.

Well this is EXACTLY what happened. The very people with established motives for conducting an event like the one that took place on 9/11/2001 were responsible for national security when we had that most unlikely, unrealistic and implausible complete catastrophic failure of every single defense procedure in operation."

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at Midway, it was the work of Tiltman -- only a few weeks after it came into use in 1939."

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the

Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

On August 8, 1945, after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Hoover wrote to Army and Navy Journal publisher Colonel John Callan O'Laughlin, "The use of the atomic bomb, with its

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues,
"When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

I'll nominate you for a Nobel Prize in physics for 2012.

You just proved, without a doubt, that satellite TV and GPS receivers do not work as advertised!

Bravo!

Thanks, but too bad they don't hand 'em out for just understanding

CERN has been doing some interesting investigation into the cosmic ether and its' refractive index:

You can download the complete .pdf file near the bottom.

You do realize that the great majority of hispanics in the Big Apple are Puerto Ricans, and are US citizens?

Also, if there was raw sewage above ground in NYC, it was a problem with the city's upkeep of the sewer system, doesn't matter what neighborhood it was.

Ok. Question: I was at cavalcade of planes this weekend in bolingbrook. Very cool. Excellent event!!! Are the numbers on the sides of the planes the call signs the pilots use to communicate onthe radio? thank you for helping me. !.

Those are airplane registration numbers (akin to the license plate on your car). I think at one time the same calls were assigned to the plane's radio, but not sure what they do for aviation radio now.

America has become a dangerous multicultural insane asylum thanks to a founding race that, due to decades of liberal/communist propaganda, has lost its will to fight for its own existence. Who will inherit the corpse of America? Probably Mexicans and/or Black Muslims.

America, R. I. P.

I believe that in most cases commercial airliners use their flight number (for example, "United 123") when communicating with air traffic control. I think most U.S. military planes use a code name like (for example) "Doom 22" as a call sign.

So the "aether" is anything, including the vacuum of space, that transmits EM waves.

You could also call the phenomenon "sprountz".

Thus, the phrase "Sprountz transmits EM waves is true" could not be falsified.

Sprountz!

Sounds about right, for the government. Legal immigration is even of numbers which our economy can't handle over a long term, the illegal immigration only hastens our fall to 3rd world status ...

I think the illegal alien problem with puerto ricans, or even cubans, is a very large problem also ... most Americans are just focused, mainly, on the wetbacks (no. American indians of mexico and so. American indians of so. America) ... few realize the true extent and dangers of this problem, and the fact in is composed of even more race/ethnic groups.

I realize that ghettos and slums frequently have the problem(s) mentioned, more so than the areas which public servants live in, anyway ... and, of such a nature, I don't want to live in those areas!

I am watching an area of my own city become a ghetto as I write this, a once fine area ... I was forced to move from an ancient area where I lived in a home which belonged to my great grandparents and has been passed down in the family (I have been forced to the out-skirts of the city where it is safer.) My Great Grandparents Home now has bars and grates on doors, windows and a state of the art burglar alarm, sprinklers come on during the night to discourage "campers" from the grounds ... you just can't hide those ugly features. We are lucky to go two weeks without having to remove graffiti from the sound wall, fences or even the house itself, which the burglar alarm is supposed to stop ... sad, so very, very sad ... the police dept has began sending us bills for automatic calls made to the police and they are forced to respond. This was the dream home me and the wife were to retire to!

Obviously, the city would love for us to turn off the alarm, let it be vandalized and torn apart, trashed. Then, and rather quickly, they would slap a nuisance claim on it and own it! Do you know what it would cost me for a private security firm to protect it?

My government seeks to victimize my family along with the criminals -- indeed, we are at the point where the actual differences between the two seem slight, and of little importance to us.

All this, and there is even a care-taking couple living in the guest house, who run off people hopping fences almost nightly, and there is UGLY razor wire atop the fences (they leap the states sound wall which we can't put razor wire on!)

They are just poor illegals who want to toss some bedding in an unused corner of the property, seek emergency shelter by just breaking one window and sleeping the night, trashing the house, just employ a poor working girl for the night, and drink some alcohol, smoke some crack, or use a bit of heroine, etc. ... poor b*st*rds!

Your defense of "the poor immigrants" is real heart touching, to you. To someone who suffers the victimizations of this massive problem, it is sheer hell ... I hope you live to see the day when these problems come to visit you, and you can finally have sympathy ...

It takes at least two generation (and that time period) living on American soil to escape the "3rd world thinking" that led them into the conditions you see these people in ... if we stop it now, it will still not improve for a couple/three generations ...

Your argument is with Einstein, I have only pointed out his works ...

Well,well,well . What about all the contraptions (thousands of them ) that are littering the space around the Solar System ? Some of these buggers were launched 20-30 years ago . And they ALL communicate (unless they broke down) with ground control through empty space .
Many millions of miles away . Yes sir . . .

That was a fact until the early 90's . That's when Mexico supplied NYC with countless Spanish -speaking illegals . They were followed by other Hispanics and gradually most PR areas changed quite rapidly .
And violently (goes unreported , btw ) .

I think the illegal alien problem with puerto ricans, or even cubans, is a very large problem also ...

You must have missed the part about Puerto Ricans being American citizens.
Puerto Rico is a US possession/protectorate, and every few years they have a vote on whether they want to become the 51st state. Thus far, they've turned it away each time, because they don't want the federal government to be able to levy taxes on them (they don't have any representation in CONgress, and so cannot be levied taxes).

Sounds about right, they are of differing purposes, one to deduce and understand the mind of the creator and the laws he established in the universe.

The other a set of rules and commandments meant to establish order over successful societies.

Johnny KQQK misses a whole lot of stuff. He's not alone though. Years ago, I saw some sort of interview with some moron running for office, and he said something about "All the illegal alien Puerto Rican's in NYC!", and the reporter said, "You do know know that Puerto Rico is US territory, and people born there are US citizens, just like you and me, right?". The moron looked at her like she was totally insane, and said,
"I'll have to check into that claim!". Thankfully, he lost.

No, actually I didn't.

However, even if you slap the name/title of "Legal Immigrant" or "American Citizen" on someone, and the rights and responsibilities that title requires, you may do little to change that/those persons/peoples mindset and behaviors, at least for significant periods of time -- an example might be picking someone out of the jungles Papua New Guinea and slapping the title on them, they might still end up eating their neighbors, at least for a bit!

http://www.papuatrekking.com/cannibals_papua.html

Wanting something for nothing is not new! Nor is living and enjoying life off the benefits of someone else footing the bill in taxes, the rich/elite have a long history of such.

When these people enter the country legally, or illegally, they bring the mind set of the state of their living conditions and society with them, sometimes they just establish those conditions here, and for many reasons, religion, ignorance, fear, profit, etc.

But, the example of Puerto Rico is, INDEED, a striking one, which you give. The public housing projects and ghettos there are VERY dangerous, you will get beaten, assualted, molested, robbed, raped, etc. if you visit there and are not mindful of the areas you visit! Rural areas are generally safer:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Crime_in_Puerto_Rico

Puerto Rico immigrants usually share a bit of something with cubans, a lot are leaving to escape prison and punishment ... Canadian immigrants are usually a bit more benign ... ROFLOL!

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

I don't think he wants to. The courts are saying he HAS to. I doubt if anyone in the state is happy about the ruling. I'm not.

Well, the bank executive who committed bank fraud, we can probably let him go without expecting violence, or new crimes -- but, I wouldn't let him work in banks ... the guy caught with marijuana plants, we can probable let him go, expecting about the same.

Problem is, I think old jerry brown with release rapists, murders, purse snatchers, violent psychotics, etc. -- I mean, these are the people who make the state money and are used as a "fear factor" to keep the general population in line in the police state ...

So, you know who will be hitting the streets!

With Gaddafi arming and training the Libyan civilian population for defense of their nation, I wonder if we are going to have to kill a good percentage of the population to achieve occupation and theft of their resources? How much bombing will be necessary before it is "safe" to send in the ground troops to deal with the civilians?:

I think these people may share a lot in common with the general American citizens on the street, both have a great fear of our government!

OK HERE IS 'THE PLAN" !

First Thing Is The State of California
Should Have It's Own Return To Mexico Law/Program/Process -so- Any of these Felons is a 'Mexican National' {Non US Citizen} They Are Let-Out at the California-Mexico Border and Rightfully

Returned to Mexico By the California
Department of Corrections with NO need for the involvement of the US Federal Government DHS/INS.

The Exception being those good, nice and law abiding 'Mexican Nationals' who become US Citizens while "IN" California Prisons for Felonies -they-can-stay-;;-}}-

Yeah I Know Another Crazy Idea ~ RHF
* Treating Criminals as Criminals
* Sending Criminal Foreigners Back-Home
* Not Allowing Criminals Foreigners
To Become US Citizens
* Treating Criminals Foreigners Better Than Law Abiding US Citizens
-change- Catch & Release
-to- Catch & Return-Back !

Yeah. And, for awhile, reagan (I still like the spelling, "raygun") had managed the most successful attacks on the standard of living of general American citizens, but bush and obama have been able to top it, make rayguns actions look like a paupers efforts.

There is a large area of my city where many of those criminals granted amnesty, by raygun, reside ... and at the opposite end of the city where the offspring of the vietnamese boat people live ... I think it is because there needs to be space between the asian gangs and the no./so. American indian gangs ... they don't seem to play well together.

If only we had planned ahead, encouraged a larger asian population, they probably would have eradicated this new wave of vermin for us.

I have done none of these. It's a fact (observed and tested medium, and wave-particle duality (which I don't deny, regardless of your unsupported assertion to the contrary) has absolutely zero to do with that fact.

I was wrong.... The Buddha got pissed off when someone ELSE flew around:

~~~~~~~~~~~~
Venerable Pindola Bharadvaja is one of the Buddha's sixteen disciples named in The Amitabha Sutra. Under the Buddha's auspices he attained the holy fruit of Arhat. Once when in a jubilant mood, he said to the faithful:

"Do you think flying in the sky is magical?
I will show you some spectacular acts."

He then jumped up into the sky, FLEW all around and performed many miraculous acts. The faithful were all impressed and praised him without ceasing. The Buddha was very displeased upon learning of this incident.
He asked the Venerable to come forth and admonished him, "My teaching uses morality to change others and compassion to save living beings. It does not use magic to impress and confuse people. You have misused magic today. As punishment you to stay in this world to work for more merits and to repent for this misbehavior."

A second example of the Venerable Pindola Bharadvaja's ability to fly ends with the same results --- the Buddha admonishing him --- hences a possible other version of the same event is found in the Amitabha Sutra, and goes like:
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

So, there we have it. Buddha don't fly.

Hey!

BUDDHAfly !

Just busting some Buddha balls is all.

Personally, I don't think Buddhism is a religion at all.

As always, the "God" is the creator which we were discussing, before your erratic changes in tangents and your circles of thought and text, was, and, is the creator mentioned by Einstein.

I understand, focus can be difficult for those suffering from ADHD, can you make notes on your hand, or something? To be so far along a path of conversation and then for you to suddenly blurt out a question covered at the very first is rather disconcerting and makes one question whether you should be involved in such conversation in the first place!

Have you noticed just how much text questions you can develop without making any points? A function of the logic and reason of your thoughts?

Pointing out that you are claiming exactly opposite to all recognized and accepted laws of physics pertaining to the theory of relativity and established by Einstein is in error?

Only if you have not read the links which contain Einsteins exact words you give an excellent example of it.

So, we are done, you simply came to deny the truths -- you could have saved us all a lot of trouble by being honest right up front ...

You have ADHD too?

Einstein believed in a creator, the links have been posted, anyone, and with a simple google search, can confirm that.

You simply want to have a religious argument centered around some specific religion, or religions, beliefs ... I don't see anyone here who has an interest in discussing religion in place of hard physics.

Perhaps your revelations and epiphanies on God would be better appreciated elsewhere?

You mean, "Einsteins creators' properties", no, Einstein only indicated that this creator is responsible for the existence, order and laws of the universe.

Einsteins text and thoughts simply demonstrate exploring the universe, that order and those laws as attempts to understand, not only the ether, but also the creator of everything ... the cutting front of physics carries this on, even today.

Well, it is, as they are on the move to limit free speech, thought and press on the internet and only have the bought and paid for main scream media considered as "valid."

However, it is more PURE EVIL than anything else ... recognizing that the pen is mightier than the sword, the criminally-treasonous public servants now take up battle with it ...

Hello all,

Wondering if one of the techxperts folk on the group could please give me an explanation (in layman's terms) of what grounding actually IS and what is its importance to ensuring good reception for a Hamster such as myself. There are numerous resources on the net that do go some way TO providing an explanation, but I must admit most of it goes straight over my head as I don't HAVE that much experience in the subject. Over the past couple of weeks my radio has gradually been getting poorer reception and I am wondering if it is becuase of a problem with the unit itself, or because of some external factor. There has recently been some new building developments going up in my residential area so am wondering if this has HAD any influence?

If it is due to 'grounding', what the heck can I do to resolve the issue?

If it's of any help/consequence, my particular unit is the Buzz Aldrin G6 aviator radio (special limited edition).

Thanks kindly in advance for any advice/resolutions.

Kind Regards,
Brian Anasta

As far as antennas go, you want a good earth ground.

Nothing beats an 8 ft. copper rod driven into good conducting ground.

The bushkultie can't recognize much less understand them,
but they remain nonetheless.

The glaring errors of the NIST 9/11 fiasco remain undisputed.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons,"
bin Laden's statement said."

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

Notice that the bushkultie must ignore this fact, too.

The bushkultie doesn't believe in actual admissible evidence.

The bushworshipper is so uncivilized as to prefer

It's not difficult to fool a bushkultie.

The bushworshipper has been tricked repeatedly.

The bushkultie is pitied, while a useful example.

The bushkultie is a mere dupe.

The bushworshipper was fooled easily by faked videos.

The claim of "incompetence" is ludicrous.

http://www.tvnewslies.org/html/smoking_gun.html

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at Midway, it was the work of Tiltman -- only a few weeks after it came into use in 1939."

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the

Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

On August 8, 1945, after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Hoover wrote to Army and Navy Journal publisher Colonel John Callan O'Laughlin, "The use of the atomic bomb, with its

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues,
"When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

Hello John & Bob,

Thanks so much for the prompt replies. I've had a read through your comments as well as undertaken a bit more reading on the various ham websites, but there are a couple of things I can't get my head around. Firstly, John what do you mean by 'good conducting ground'? Does this refer to the geological aspects of the grounds, e.g. clay soil etc? My particular lot of land is heavy clay based and I'm wondering if this is having an effect.What do you recommend to be the ground which offers the best quality and can I improvise somehow to improve the ground where I live which as I mentioned is very heavy clay based.

Secondly, Bob, when you talk about the 'counterpoise', is this the same as John refers to, i.e. the actual ground itself? Someone has recommended I should consider having someone put in a 220 line for an amplifier as he said that would make a perfect ham radio station. The person I spoke with, who in all honesty I don't think is an expert, also spoke about quarter wave verticals and RF energy. Now I think these concepts are above and beyond my skill-set but I am assuming RF refers to radio frequency?

Thanks very much again guys for the help and explanations to an annoying newbie heh.

Kind Regards,
Brian Anasta

These languages are incredible shoes in purple neon and the base color of the shoes. Mark flying giant Nike has a shoe to ensure comfort. If anyone wants to see pictures of these shoes can be found at various websites.Nike Air Jordan

This new colorway is definitely one that original fans should come to love. Though lacking the fanfare of the Air Jordan VI (6) and Air Jordan IX (9) retros, theAir Force Oneretro basketball shoe is certainly having a good year of releases. We¡¯ve seen the Bulls-colorway edition, the Silver Anniversary edition in stark white and silver, and the Premio Bin 23 edition, among a few others, and now fans of this model get a chance to get their hands on a slickly-styled university blue and black model. Featuring a mixture of materials like suede and pebbled leather, the upper appears in mostly the shade of blue that Jordan knew well while at University of North Carolina. Black accents appear throughout the upper and on the heel and midsole. This model also boasts an icy blue outsole to add to the intrigue. This is a first on the Air Jordan 2 (II) retro basketball shoe, and it does not disappoint.

Of course. Ether IS a religion.

For instance, if you believed in ghosts, (I bet you do) that

Thanks very much RHF for those links! I have put a pot of coffee on and am planning to spend the next couple of hours trying to educate myself on this topic. Again, thanks very much to Bob and John for their offers of assistance also. This group is a really neat little resource for enthusiasts like me to turn to for that bit of extra help and guidance.

Have a great day all and thanks again, much appreciated.

There is a never ending list of things NIST got wrong in their Government paid for 911 commission report! Here is just one!

They said after listening to tapes where the audible level was dubed.That the elevation of noise was not loud enough for an explotion large enough to bring down the twin towers!

Why was such an explanation entered into their report,when they saw with their own eyes that there were multiple explotions throughout the buildings going off at a timed sequence,taking out the support columns.They saw it was not the work of a single explotion but the result of multiple explotions.

Thermate cutter charges are noted for their demolition properties not their loudness.They knew the charges were built into the buildings during their construction and had to see they were utilized during the demolition of all three towers!

This NIST report got Rudi's insider trading a great return on putt options and Larry Silverstien a mega insurance claim,it herded the sheeples attention away from asbestos lawsuits and concieled their governments connection to the mass murder!

Want me to list another lie NIST presented to the world for pacification?

I can tell you're an expert, just by the way you spell "explosion."

That tells me you are extremely proficient in the science of physics and chemistry. You may have even met someone who studied the subject, or watched "Mythbusters" once to see them try to blow up a Bic lighter by leaving it on the dashboard of a car.

Pray tell, what other Secrets can you reveal to us?

Moist/wet earth is generally a better conductor of RF/electricity.

Commercial broadcasters can spend much money on a "ground system" than the antenna, proper, and can actually end up being a sufficient counterpoise for the antenna, actually buried in the ground!

In our world, it helps to have your ground stake(s) in a moist area of soil where the soil has good conductivity. Salts in the soil help with the soils conductivity. Since my ground state is at the corner of a well fertilized lawn this is achieved.

With grounds, the bigger, more conductive, etc. is better.

In the real world, we just settle for sufficient ...

Here is some material for thought:

Hello Dave,

Maybe no one is listening whom they can sell some contract to make money. There are also many listeners who don't tell they are listening for several reasons.

I am therefore happy that "Radio Nederland Wereldomroep" (RN) intentions are to continue their service in foreign languages.

Hi, Brian - I won't add to the good advice here on grounding, but reception / propagation has actually been worsening recently, owing to greater atmospheric noise and geomagnetic storms...plus the usual summertime blues. Don't worry, it'll pick up again.

Quite a few apparently feel that way, since it doesn't involve deities.

Personally, I feel that "religion" encompasses any belief involving spiritualism in any form (i.e., anything for which belief rather than evidence is basic), and at least one dictionary definition seems to agree:

"A set of beliefs, values, and practices based on the teachings of a spiritual leader."

Seems specifically appropriate for Buddhism...

Einstein's "gravitational ether" was a metaphor (you can ask Mommy what that means) and no physical medium is required for the propagation of EM radiation.

IOW, there's no "stuff"; there's only spacetime shaped by mass and energy.

My "claim(s)" are these are direct quotes from Einstein:

ï¿½That deep emotional conviction of the presence of a superior reasoning revealed in the incomprehensible universe, forms my idea of God.ï¿½ -- Albert Einstein

ï¿½Whoever undertakes to set himself up as a judge of Truth and Knowledge

But, now, I must further claim your spin tactics are to put words into Further, you attempt to degrade and deny Einstein and his statements/beliefs in such spin tactics.

That is all which is happening here, that is all which has been happening since you and your ilk has stuck their religion-focused-arses into the discussion, before your type came on the scene ...

A blaring truth can no longer be escaped ...

The most wackiest religious fanatic has more in common with the greatest thinkers of all time than you, yourself, indeed, than any atheist who denies a creator.

You have not failed in all your efforts, you have managed to get that to my attention ...

Well now we know Einstein was raised Jewish so this is hardly a

This was written in 1905 when he was 26 years old using allegory to make a point. This is scarcely an espousal of conventional judaism.

I don't but you apparently do so let me give some full and unabridged quotes

In 1927

"I cannot conceive of a personal God who would directly influence the actions of individuals, or would directly sit in judgment on creatures of his own creation. I cannot do this in spite of the fact that mechanistic causality has, to a certain extent, been placed in doubt by modern science.
My religiosity consists in a humble admiration of the infinitely superior spirit that reveals itself in the little that we, with our weak and transitory understanding, can comprehend of reality. Morality is of the highest importance-but for us, not for God. "

In 1945
"From the viewpoint of a Jesuit priest I am, of course, and have always been an atheist.... I have repeatedly said that in my opinion the idea of a personal God is a childlike one. You may call me an agnostic, but I do not share the crusading spirit of the professional atheist whose fervor is mostly due to a painful act of liberation from the fetters of religious indoctrination received in youth. I prefer an attitude of humility corresponding to the weakness of our intellectual understanding of nature

In 1954
"It was, of course, a lie what you read about my religious convictions, a lie which is being systematically repeated. I do not believe in a personal God and I have never denied this but have expressed it clearly. If something is in me which can be called religious then it is the unbounded admiration for the structure of the world so far as our science can reveal it. "

Shortly before he died
"The word God is for me nothing more than the expression and product of human weaknesses, the Bible a collection of honourable, but still primitive legends which are nevertheless pretty childish."

> That is all which is happening here, that is all which has been > happening since you and your ilk has stuck their > religion-focused-arses into the discussion, before your type came on > the scene ...

The only person who persists on bringing in religion is YOU and you are the only person who believes that telling the truth is degrading.

Returned to Mexico By the California

The Bigger Problem is an Illegal Alien Invader from Mexico is 'Released' from a California

Criminal is 'let-go' back in to California to Victimize the Citizens of California Again.

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears
juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Do your song and dance, I think most can realize what Einsteins Creator was ... that Einstein acknowledged the existence of such and intelligence ...

Your particular religious belief in atheism is also noted.

So, sing, dance, be merry, we have established the base lines ...

Most here are pretend-Atheists that only act/react exactly like Semites that never actually believed in any wrath of God anyway. So, it's always full speed ahead for them, and never any remorse no matters how many do-overs they manage to screw up.

Expecting anything else from a certified FUD-master would be crazy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Hah thanks Bob I don't feel QUITE as bad for asking all these newbie questions now. I am afraid, however, when things start getting a little too technical then I may not be 'wet and naked', but maybe just a little stoopid hehe. Oh well, all part of the learning process as you say and I think for me, that just makes this ham radio obsession all the more fun! I sometimes feel like a baby taking its first steps but what the heck, all part of the adventure :)

The tard isn't getting it. It's obvious to everyone that the tard is not a 60+ year old woman, as the tard fatuously maintains, but instead is a snarky young - or immature - male. The vocabulary, the overall writing style, the times of day at which the snarky-boy posts appear - everything says this is a snarky punk boy. It's so.

John, thanks for that link, it made for good reading. Just in regard to antennas though, I am becoming more aware of the importance of them to getting good reception. In regard to my little Grundig, would my antenna be of the SWL antenna variety? And what the heck sort of antennas are 'dipoles' and 'Yagi beams'?! I've never heard of those types before and wonder are these only found on the large-scale ham radio stations? Gotta love the names of them that's for sure hehe.

Thanks so much for your help in advance.

Ya never know about these posters. Deep conflictual feelings can result in odd or eratic behaviors. Of course, there is a possibilty that he is dating a 60+ year-old woman. So what is the problem?

The official story of 9/11 is a fabrication that would never hold up in court.

The bushkultie can't recognize much less understand them,
but they remain nonetheless.

The glaring errors of the NIST 9/11 fiasco remain undisputed.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal
Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

"I would like to assure the world that I did not plan the recent attacks,
which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons,"
bin Laden's statement said."

http://articles.cnn.com/2001-09-16/us/inv.binladen.denial_1_bin-laden-taliban-supreme-lead er-mullah-mohammed-omar?_s=PM:US

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and
disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

Notice that the bushkultie must ignore this fact, too.

On Wed, 11 May 2011 19:55:30 -0700 (PDT), "Craves Fascist Iarnrod Up Gaping Ass" <iarnrod@yahoo.com> failed, flailed and foamed in impotent bushkultie kooker rage:

You do have problems.

Of course you can't name one item of admissible evidence
that would exculpate your neocon idols, bushkultie.

>...cannot NAME ONE...

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to "Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at Midway, it was the work of Tiltman -- only a few weeks after it came into use in 1939."

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

The very people with established motives for conducting an event like the one that took place on 9/11/2001 were responsible for national security when we had that most unlikely, unrealistic and implausible complete catastrophic failure of every single defense procedure in operation."

http://www.tvnewslies.org/html/smoking_gun.html

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before

Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

What we have is a complete record of your beliefs, actions, methods, and mechanizations, recorded in your posts here.

And, what they amount to is mind which has predetermined religious belief(s) that there is no creator, that there is no mind/intelligence which is responsible for the creation of the universe.

We have your bizarre claims and faith that this is but one humongous accident/magic, that these sort of things "just happen" and that matter and life are only products of spontaneous generation.

Since this requires an incredible leap of faith and absurdly ridiculous religious faith, you are just a nutjob who would straighten out and educate the best thinking minds that they are gravely in error ...

But, perhaps worst of all, you expect us to swallow all that and not laugh.

... come on ... how many other incredibly complex designs do you see "just happening?" Do you often dig up such things which have formed out of the elements and just lie about awaiting discovery in the dirt?

"congratulations for your willingness to look at the proof about 9-11"

http://www.911proof.com/

Notice that the bushkultie won't be able to address
any of the facts from the above site at all.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

"I would like to assure the world that I did not plan the recent attacks,
which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons,"
bin Laden's statement said."

http://articles.cnn.com/2001-09-16/us/inv.binladen.denial_1_bin-laden-taliban-supreme-leader-mullah-mohammed-omar?_s=PM:US

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and
disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

Of course you can't name one item of admissible evidence that would exculpate your neocon idols, bushkultie.

>...cannot NAME ONE...

Of course you can't name one item of admissible evidence
that would exculpate your neocon idols, bushkultie.

So what's your excuse for your inability to insist on a valid trial for the most horrific crime of this millenium to date?

That is your best excuse.

>...Hates US

Of course you hate America when you insist that those who murder Americans should not be prosecuted
according to the rule of law.

Notice that you can't name one thing that would be admissible evidence against the scapegoat chosen
by your fascist masters.

>... run away again without NAMING ONE THING ...

Of course you can't name one item of admissible evidence

The bushkultie has no admissible evidence, and doesn't even know what it is.

<cricket.wav>

You always do.

The bushkultie doesn't believe in actual admissible evidence.

The bushworshipper is so uncivilized as to prefer
assassinations to trials.

It's not difficult to fool a bushkultie.

The bushworshipper has been tricked repeatedly.

The bushkultie is pitied, while a useful example.

The bushkultie is a mere dupe.

The bushworshipper was fooled easily by faked videos.

Others could see the discrepancies quite clearly.

The real perps were 'incompetent' all the way to their offshore accounts.

The claim of "incompetence" is ludicrous.

http://www.oilempire.us/911.html

Nobody had the means/motive/opportunity of Bush and Cheney.

The very people with established motives for conducting an event like the one that took place on 9/11/2001 were responsible for national security when we had that most unlikely, unrealistic and implausible complete catastrophic failure of every single defense procedure in operation."

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received
word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before

Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

The bushkultie can't prove it'd be true, of course.

The official story of 9/11 is a fabrication that would

The bushkultie can't recognize much less understand them,
but they remain nonetheless.

The glaring errors of the NIST 9/11 fiasco remain undisputed.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

Well this is EXACTLY what happened. The very people with established motives for conducting an event like the one that took place on 9/11/2001 were responsible for national security when we had that most unlikely, unrealistic and implausible complete catastrophic failure of every single defense procedure in operation."

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received
word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before

Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Actually Monsanto and a few others (including DARPA and Qinetiq) have been doing intelligent design and/or genetic manipulations on a regular basis. Some have been actively creating hybrid humans.

With a little radiation and/or toxins introduced into our environment has created some rather unusual variations (though often not always for the better), so it's entirely possible for even us humans via directed panspermia and DNA/RNA artificial variations to create complex life where it had never existed and probably would never have happened on its own.

Your whole live is a pathetic derivative of social/political/religious voodoo and cabal policies, doing only whatever you've been indoctrinated to do and say. In other words, you and your remorseless killing machine kids would have been ideal for Hitler or any other warlord that happen to be in charge. In a few other words, you and your robot borg like kids go along with the mainstream flow of the moment, no matters what the consequences, doing only exactly as you were either instructed and/or allowed to do because you either can't or wouldn't dare think or rationalize anything through for yourself.

This must be the primary reason there's a record percentage level of military family dysfunctions and suicides. Way to go, HVAC. Perhaps GW Bush and Dick Cheney should have given you and your deaf, dumb and blind "follow the leader" kids the highest medal of honor, starting off with your butt-sucking generation getting JFK killed.

They never warn about 'weak arm' robberies. I'm guessing the cops keep the more feminine hoodlums for themselves to look after. They need a break from shooting all the mentally ill homeless derelicts.

You know less about Einstein than you do about SR and GR; I didn't think that was possible. And your out-of-context quote mining, when Einstein himself said he didn't believe in a personal deity, is indicative of your basic dishonesty.

"I do not believe in a personal God and I have never denied this but have expressed it clearly. If something is in me which can be called religious then it is the unbounded admiration for the structure of the world so far as our science can reveal it." (Albert Einstein, 1954)

And BTW, "spacetime" was Einstein's idea.

HTH, and HANL; I'm through trying to educate you.

"Recapitulating, we may say that according to the general theory of relativity space is endowed with physical qualities; in this sense, therefore, there exists an ether.
According to the general theory of relativity space without ether is unthinkable; for in such space there not only would be no propagation of light, but also no possibility of existence for standards of space and time (measuring-rods and clocks), nor therefore any space-time intervals in the physical sense. But this ether may not be thought of as endowed with the quality characteristic of ponderable media, as consisting of parts which may be tracked through time.
The idea of motion may not be applied to it." - Albert Einstein

See the part about "But this ether may not be thought of as endowed with the quality characteristic of ponderable media"?

Do you understand the meaning of "metaphor"? Einstein's "ether" was, as he said (and as I stated previously) a metaphor for "the physical qualities of spacetime" (paraphrased from the above quote).

Still failing to catch on to the use of a search engine?:

1: to call upon officially or authoritatively to appear (as before a court)

2: to quote by way of example, authority, or proof <cites several noteworthy authors>

3:
a : to refer to; especially : to mention formally in commendation or praise
b : to name in a citation

4: to bring forward or call to another's attention especially as an example, proof, or precedent <cited the weather as a reason for canceling the picnic>

So, we have arrived back at the start of the circle and Einsteins' creator, but like a merry-go-around, you will soon begin the next ... so, let's do a few quotes by Albert, and then you present your circle, again:

"The human mind is not capable of grasping the Universe. We are like a little child entering a huge library. The walls are covered to the ceilings with books in many different tongues. The child knows that someone must have written these books. It does not know who or how. It does not understand the languages in which they are written. But the child notes a definite plan in the arrangement of the booksï¿½-a mysterious order which it does not comprehend, but only dimly suspects."

"My religion consists of a humble admiration of the illimitable superior spirit who reveals himself in the slight details we are able to perceive with our frail and feeble mind."

"Every one who is seriously involved in the pursuit of science becomes convinced that a spirit is manifest in the laws of the Universe-a spirit vastly superior to that of man, and one in the face of which we with our modest powers must feel humble."

"The scientistsï¿½ religious feeling takes the form of a rapturous amazement at the harmony of natural law, which reveals an intelligence of such superiority that, compared with it, all the systematic thinking and acting of human beings is an utterly insignificant reflection."

"The further the spiritual evolution of mankind advances, the more certain it seems to me that the path to genuine religiosity does not lie through the fear of life, and the fear of death, and blind faith, but through striving after rational knowledge."

My father always recommended, when you find yourself in a hole, stop digging! Now would be a good time for you ...

Actually, spacetime = ether.

Reminds me of Oprah, where she gave away cars to people who couldn't even afford the tax, license and insurance on them!

And, now, times have gotten MUCH WORSE!

She should have been handing out free visits to clinics and food baskets; and, maybe vouchers for hotel rooms?

Orpah, (her given name) not Oprah, she was born in Kosciusko, not far North of doggy's couch.I used to have an Uncle who owned a Farm near Kosciusko

Howsomever, there was some kind of a catch pertaining to those so-called 'free' Pontiac cars that Orpah 'gave away'.I don't remember what that catch was about though.

Watchin the tee vee station that doesn't exist, Stephanie Bell Flint said they have determined German (Krauts, I call them Germans) grown vegetable sprouts are the source of that E.Coli that is killing people.She also said some restaurants are still using those vegetable sprouts.

They only get tangent and obfuscate whenever they're not pulling off another false-flagged war, or perpetrating something worse. After all, FUD-masters have their instructions (as did those of their kind working for Hitler).

Why don't you start by setting a good example?

Tell us why someone closely associated with our CIA, Operation 40, and even well enough known by MI that knew about Operation 40 that took out JFK?

Are you saying that each and every tidbit of investigative information from William Mook is bogus?

Are you saying that religion never gets involved with politics?

No. I'm saying 90% of your writing is incomprehensible rubbish. If there are cogent arguments in what you write they are buried under convoluted ramblings and bizarre syntax.

Just answering your questions Brad Guth, Brad_Guth, Brad.Guth, BradGuth, BG /

I can tell all ,that your expertise is limited to spelling.

What a waist of a brain,when you have been programed to avoid reality based on spelling.

Just think if you could get past this hangup,you could move onto things of importance.

It is a pitty to see how many people can spell but not think.

Shit #2 has already been given the job of being my spell checker,if she falls ill and cannot service me anymore I will take your resume

So, Mr. all-knowing wise guy spook/mole, tell us why the version of history that involves JFK, as interpreted and told by William Mook is wrong.

I'll tell you what's REALLY funny. Kooks like you never have a sense of humor and seemingly take zero pleasure in life.

Why is that, Bradley?

In the words of the Joker....Why so serious?

In other words, William Mook's interpretation of what got JFK and RFK

It's good to know what skulduggery side a devout ZNR redneck like yourself is on.

A brief summary of the typical symptoms of PPD includes:

suspiciousness and distrust of others questioning hidden motives in others feelings of certainty, without justification or proof, that others are intent on harming or exploiting them social isolation aggressiveness and hostility little or no sense of humor

I am young at heart, in absolutely excellent physical condition, and haven't been on a morphine drip since January when I had my back surgery. I am very concerned about YOU, however....You just seem to never derive any fun from life. Do you do anything for fun?
Do you like fishing? Do you go to strip clubs? Exactly what DO you do for fun?

ARLP023 Propagation de K7RA

ZCZC AP23
QST de W1AW
Propagation Forecast Bulletin 23 ARLP023
From Tad Cook, K7RA
Seattle, WA June 10, 2011
To all radio amateurs

ARLP023 Propagation de K7RA

Although higher early in the reporting week, average daily sunspot numbers declined over four points to 85.7 and the average of daily solar flux numbers was down a point and a half to 101.6, when compared to the previous week, May 26 to June 1.

Predicted solar flux for the near term is 88 on June 10-13, then 86, 84, 84, 88, 95, on June 14-18, then 92 on June 19-21, 95 and 100 on June 22-23 and 110 on June 24-26. Solar flux then rises to a peak of 115 on June 28. Predicted planetary A index is 25, 12, 8 and 8 on June 10-13, then 5 on June 14-22, then peaking at 15 on June 24-25.

Geophysical Institute Prague predicts unsettled to active conditions June 10, unsettled June 11, quiet to unsettled June 12-13, unsettled June 14, quiet to unsettled June 15, and quiet conditions June 16.

On June 3 there were 8 sunspot groups facing Earth, numbered consecutively 1225-1232. Then on June 5, groups 1225, 1229, 1230 and 1231 disappeared, and new group 1233 emerged. On June 7 1233 disappeared, and on June 9 1226 left us and new group 1234 appeared.

Scott Bidstrup, TI3/W7RI sent a link to some fantastic HD videos of solar eruptions. Go to http://www.thesuntoday.org/current-observations/a-spectacular-event-a-filamentprominence-eruption-to-blow-your-socks-off/

If you check page 14 on the report http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/weekly/pdf/prf1861.pdf and compare it with page 15 on http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/weekly/pdf/prf1866.pdf you can see that some reported and predicted smoothed sunspot numbers have changed over the last month. The smoothed sunspot numbers for December 2010 through November 2011 have each gone down one or two points. The numbers are smoothed over a year, so the current month would average actual data that has already been measured for about the past six months with about six months of data predicted into the future.

Bob Cashdollar, NR8U of Newark, Ohio reports, "On June 4 at 0208z checked 10M for activity for the 10-X Open Season Contest. When I fired up the rig and computer, I landed right on ZL3TE working another ZL on PSK31 on 28.120 MHz. He was very strong and I watched the QSO on the waterfall. When he finished with the ZL QSO I called him and to my surprise he came right back and we exchanged info. I thought this contest was going to be really easy. Boy, was I mistaken! I had a lot of trouble seeing and working anybody stateside. Checked the band this morning (June 4) around 1400z and most stations were not workable, with a lot of scattering of the other stations transmissions. Maybe I should go up to Bob W3HKK that you mentioned in your last column; he just lives about 25 miles NW of me. Maybe he has better propagation!"

Jon Jones, N0JK of Kansas reports, "I worked Dave, VP5/W5CW on 6M SSB on June 1 at 0018z. Dave worked many across the mid USA on double hop Es the afternoon of May 31. I was operating portable using a 2 el Yagi."

Charlie Calhoun, K5TTT of Owasso, Oklahoma (EM26ch) wrote, "I had something unexpected happen during the Es openings this week on 6m. On two consecutive days I worked two different stations in totally different directions, less than 24 hours from exactly one year prior. On 6/1/2010, I worked XE2NS, DL95 at 0247z, then on 6/1/2011 I worked Alfonso again at 0323z. I thought that was pretty neat until the next day when I worked K0PP, DN36 at 0322z and noticed him in my log from 0305z, 6/3/2010."

Last week's Propagation Forecast Bulletin, ARLP022 (see http://www.arrl.org/w1aw-bulletins-archive/ARLP022/2011) contained a message from Rudy Hanau, K2EVY of Rye Brook, New York about some 20 meter backscatter propagation he experienced. The report didn't mention this, but the propagation was observed around 0300z on May 29. I passed this on to Carl Luetzelschwab, K9LA, who had the following comments for Rudy:

"I looked at the Boulder ionosonde data (kind of along your path to K6ZA) for a couple days before and after May 29. The data show a depletion (roughly 33%) of F2 region electrons on May 28 and May 29, undoubtedly due to the spike in the A index beginning on May 27 and continuing through May 30. I'm sure this would show up in other mid latitude ionosondes. This is likely the reason the 'normal' path wasn't there.

"Next I looked at Pt Arguello (Vandenberg AFB, Southern California) ionograms from 0215-0300 UTC on May 29. They show good sporadic-E traces that could easily support 14 MHz. The Pt Arguello ionosonde is about 230 miles SSE of K6ZA, so it is as good an indicator as anything that Es was occurring in the vicinity of K6ZA.

"Thus this cursory look says your unusual path might have been due to an Es cloud. Kind of makes sense since we're in the Es season. And it might explain K6ZA's follow-on QSO with the Nevada guy.

"I think this is about as far as I can take it without wildly waving my arms."

Rudy responded, "I was not aware that sporadic-E effects were noticeable all the way down to 20 meters." Carl responded, "I agree that the 'normal' refraction mechanism is likely out of the picture on 20m as the high sporadic-E electron density is probably not thick enough vertically for refraction on 14 MHz.

"I wasn't thinking refraction - I should have been more explicit. I considered reflection and scatter from the sporadic-E cloud.

"As for conductivity, the highest electron density seen in the Pt Arguello ionograms (8 MHz) translates to a conductivity of around .00025 S/m on 14 MHz. Poor ground has a conductivity of .002 S/m, so we're an order of magnitude less than poor ground. Regardless, some reflection could occur on 20m."

Thanks, Carl!

And last, Bob Paglee, who is probably either WA7CFP or KB2ITO (he didn't say) of Moorestown, New Jersey, sent a note after reading our item in Propagation Forecast Bulletin ARLP021 about the geophysical announcements on WWV ending, and thought WWV was being shut down, which it is not. Bob can rest easy. WWV is not going away. The solar flux and geomagnetic indices that are updated every three hours and currently are broadcast via voice at 18 minutes after each hour are ending. The same reports will still be available on the internet at:

http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/ftpdir/latest/wwv.txt

That is the text of the message that is currently read on WWV.

Look don't sweat their strawmen arguments based around spelling which go like this, "If your spelling is in error, your logic is in error."

Anyone of real worth will gauge your writing on the logic, not on the spelling ... just get the logic right ...

Never heard of anyone with that name. Don't you have any servants who can look that up for you.

Can you afford a tutor?

A real investigation can't be allowed into 9/11 because of that the real scientists, engineers and architects have already investigated, found and have pointed out to us, that a crime was committed on 9/11 which involved members from our public servants assisting some form of shadow government.

The most important things with can be done is a realization that our public servants are corrupt and criminal. We need full realization that this criminal corruption goes all the way to the top and involves the highest public servants in our country and that their influence even has our military involved in the crimes.

All our efforts need to be focused in returning power to the people, there is a war going on in our country between our criminal public servants who are serving as puppets for the shadow government and ourselves.

But, we also need to reach behind the puppet public servants and grab those puppet masters who lie in the shadows pulling strings, such as the bilderberger group ...

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Racist?

Where the hell do you nuts keep getting that from?

Did you even try to count the white people attacking the tree?

How many did you see?

I was not commenting on the logic of the post ... which may, or may not, be of any real value ... I am just tired of punctuation, grammar, spelling, etc. being cited as "proof" of defective logic ...

That's all ... the strawmen attacks, no matter how they are crafted, or about what elements they are crafted, are getting rather boring ...

I enjoy helping others, as something that a GOP/ZNR redneck like yourself has never accomplished. I also fix stuff for others as well as for myself, unlike your kind that only buys new stuff. So I have fun without it costing an arm and a leg.

Most commercial sports and other forms of spendy entertainment or optional spendy and often risky forms of personal recreation I think should be taxed 100%, so that the other 99.9% of us can afford to have safe and reasonably affordable fun.

Why should 99.9% of us have to pay for whatever the 0.1% get to do and get in trouble while doing it?

Obviously you never give an honest tinker damn about others outside of your upper most 0.1%, as having any spare cash or time for fun.

Liberty Net: June 4, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/06/liberty-net-june-4-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE LIBERTY NET RECEIVED a double whammy of very long propagation and high lightning static this week, but that didnï¿½t dampen the intensity of the conversation and debate ï¿½ though it did point up the desirability of full legal power and high, efficient antenna systems.

Hereï¿½s just a tiny sample of the ideas debated this week on amateur radioï¿½s historic and longest-running ï¿½ since 1974 ï¿½ discussion net:

ï¿½ Water parks, restaurants, beaches, and entire sections of cities have had to be shut down so far this Spring because of destructive ï¿½ and even murderous ï¿½ Black ï¿½flash mobs,ï¿½ allegedly facilitated by social networking sites. One wonders to what extent the Internet aspect of the problem is exaggerated in order to justify surveillance and censorship of all of us, when the problem is really biological in nature. White flash mobs are totally different, for example, involving such things as calm, tender dancing at the Jefferson Memorial and singing songs from the Sound of Music at railway stations. (15 minutes)

ï¿½ Whether or not the FBI acts on the criminal complaint regarding the false birth certificate put out by the White House, its action or inaction will tell us a great deal about the integrity of that agency. (28 minutes)

ï¿½ As predicted months ago on the Liberty Net, the Chinese have now dumped over 97% of their US Treasury bonds. But who is fool enough to have bought these negative-yield turkeys? Is the Federal Reserve acting as the ï¿½fool of last resortï¿½? (34 minutes)

ï¿½ Where have all the hundreds of millions of dollars come from that are being spent to promote the candidacies of Rick Perry and Mitt Romney? People on the street hardly care about these phony-smile establishment ciphers ï¿½ so, if the moneyï¿½s not coming from Main Street, itï¿½s a good bet itï¿½s coming from Wall Street: the same place from which Obama gets many millions too. (44 minutes)

ï¿½ Was it a coincidence that immediately after John Kennedy was assassinated, 1) the floodgates of non-White immigration were opened; 2) our currency was debased and the peopleï¿½s gold and silver stolen; and 3) our freedom of association was abrogated under wildly

misnamed ï¿½civil rightsï¿½ laws? (46 minutes)

ï¿½ Recently it was ruled that the Bank of America must pay the legal fees of a couple who were wrongly foreclosed upon. When the bank refused to pay up, the couple successfully foreclosed on the bank! (1 hour 4 minutes)

ï¿½ Disease- and poverty-wracked African nations could greatly benefit from the presence of millions of relatively educated Blacks from America ï¿½ just as America could benefit from their absence. (1 hour 19 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s now been revealed that the ï¿½Project for the New American Centuryï¿½ and other Jewish groups fabricated stories of Iraqi atrocities in order to agitate the ignorant into supporting the US invasions in the Middle East. Is it any wonder, then, that more and more people ï¿½ including scholars and historians ï¿½ are doubting their WWII atrocity stories too? (1 hour 29 minutes)

ï¿½ The dumbing down of America is not just an educational problem. Itï¿½s also a genetic problem, with the lowest-IQ parts of the population having, by far, the highest immigration and birth rates. Genetic causes can only be affected by biological and geographical means (that is, by policies aimed at expanding the higher-quality European proportion of the population, and eventually granting total self-determination behind 100% secure borders to all). Spending more on education will have zero effect. (2 hours 3 minutes)

The Liberty Net ï¿½ amateur radioï¿½s longest-running discussion net ï¿½ is on the air every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time on or around 3950 kHz SSB (lately itï¿½s been higher in frequency ï¿½ as high as 3993 ï¿½ to avoid DRM and other interference). Youï¿½ll have to tune around, but itï¿½s not hard to find!

Remember, thanks to N2SAG and N2IRJ and W1WCR, you can listen live ï¿½ and chat live ï¿½ via the Web whenever the Liberty Net is on the air. And, as always, you can download the net right here at http://3950.net and listen at your leisure.

Our worst financial fear is that the Chinese would do what you claim they have already done.

Quite interesting but hard to believe. Do you have a citation for this?

It's my understanding that the Chinese are the major holders of our debt and that if they really did dump 97%(!) of them, we would be in a much worse financial fix than we are already in.

I certainly don't. Nor "ZNR". Nor your use of the term
"redneck", which doesn't seem to agree with normal usage.

Hint: Words and acronyms you make up aren't automatically part of the general lexicon.

Just because you worship him is no indication that anyone convey.

Since no one knows what that "interpretation" consists of, or what it's based on, how can we know? Knowing you from your posts, however, I'd venture that it's not in dispute because it's imaginary.

Here's a suggestion, Sparky: If you'd like to see how real forensic analysis is done, pick up and read the book "Mortal Error" by Bonar Menninger, ISBN 0-312-08074-3. He makes a strong argument, based on actual physical evidence, regarding how JFK died.

What's a "ZNR"? And just to satisfy my curiosity, what's your personal definition of "redneck"?

I dont know, I looked it up and couldn't find anything political from anyone named that, just some circuit designer and some guy raving about atomic spaceships. I would guess he's the one Brad keeps going on about, but I don't see anything from him as crazy as Guthballian Venus, so maybe that's wrong.

My boy Jack Wesolowski, is one of the most notorious trolls on the

After stupidly exposing his real identity early on, and flushing the

One of his latest identities is Gary Sokolisch, which he began using at the beginning of this year.

Electrical, electronics, hydraulics, acoustical matters, equipment installations and/or upgrades for much of what a typical private family or light commercial boat requires. I've even accomplished complex work for the Alaska State Ferry System. Yes, I have my own tools, training and personal expertise in those categories. My shop also has machining and welding as well as some limited sheet-metal fabrication capabilities, and I can run AutoCad in my spare time. I'm not claiming to be the top alpha dog or wizard in all things boat/yacht related, but then I'm not half the cost of what most others get to charge, in fact some well known shipyards have charged their clients more than ten times what I would have charged to accomplished the same or better work (especially spendy when there's no paper trails associated).

Anything in personal excess that's 4X more spendy than WalMart outfitting or whatever similar indulgence or entertainment disparity, you bet.

I know of tax avoidance (meaning offshore registered or corporate overhead deducted) yacht-owners that essentially own and operate their $10+ million dollar boats for their fishing. Each and every pound of their tax-avoidance fish is costing us over $1000.

Like read or watch the news, or pay attention to those emergency services that are mostly public funded, not to mention various legal and insurance fees that we all get to pay at least quadruple for.

Fine and dandy, then by all means charge those watching and especially those touching, with a 100% tax.

I should have written Treasury _bills_ instead of bonds. They have indeed dumped 97% of the bills -- and they have now started to reduce their holdings of the bonds as well:

Always wanted a "glass-bottom boat".

Unlike yourself, when a private owned vessel needs something that I can offer, I actually delivered good value and afterwords didn't have to run and hide myself inside of some dank and smelly trailer park under a bogus name.

The biggest mistakes that I've made is that I didn't stand up for myself, which lead clients to getting screwed by those that were always pissed that anyone else was independently involved between the client and access to his bank account, because they obviously wanted full exclusive access with no possible intervention by independents like myself. So I was technically bullied away or indirectly excluded whenever they could manage.

btw; I only got paid by check, so there's no lack of paper trails on my part. Although I know of shipyards and few individuals that accepted cash-cash with no questions asked. Of course I have no way of knowing if they paid any associated sales or income tax on that cash-cash loot, but according to rednecks like yourself, they're all perfectly honest folks exactly like yourself.

Your redneck approved government basically destroyed 90+% of the private boating market (especially of the middle and low-end investments), most of which was made up of active middle class families with 2+ kids and a dog (some having a cat) that stuck together as a team that went lots of places with their boats. Nowadays, 95% of the private power boats sit as moorage placeholders with near empty fuel tanks, and/or as part of some foreclosure. I know a few higher-end yacht owners with extremely powerful big yachts that hardly ever go anywhere, and when they travel by boat is always at minimal speed (not much above idle in order to get roughly 0.5 nm/gallon, with their big engine turbochargers actually creating a slight vacuum instead of offering any boost ).

I am "pre-renaming everything with fairytale names." And example is gay = homosexual! It ruins the word gay -- besides, we already had "queer" to use as slang for homosexual, then there is "mentally handicapped" for retarded, etc.

I say, rename a turd anything you would like ... still a turd!

Which is why you're on Usenet trying to find suckers to blindly accept your horseshit despite the fact you can present NO conclusive evidence even about a single specific detail to show that it supports your claims, assertions and/or theories.

The wife and I have a negro friend who introduced us, many moons ago.

Both the wife and I joke with him and tell him, "You have no clue you are black, huh?" ROFLOL And he doesn't, THANK GOD!

No jive talk, no ebonics, perfect english, no griping about not getting something given to him, no expectation of special favors or that he should be paid for his ancient ancestors being mistreated.

I love to sit back and watch racist people meet him, then get to know him, find out they should be embarrassed to stand next to him -- they are forced to eat their presupposed opinions with bitter bile!

These people exist, you just get used to the trash who is in government offices (or, public servants, does charlie rangel and jesse jackson ring a bell?) or welfare lines!

He owns one of the most successful road construction outfits which contracts with the state and feds on highway/freeway, as an independent contractor, work. The company is a success because of this mans character, hard work and ethical/moral nature, MAKE NO MISTAKE!

He has pics of him, brothers, dad and granddad shoveling blacktop out of trucks to fill pot holes! The blacktop was mixed in old heated cement mixers.

Do the politicians ever hold him up as a success story, HELL NO! And, you know why! He was once asked to speak on behalf of the black chamber of commerce ... they NEVER asked him back ... ROFLOL! He told them about hard work, treating all people fairly, that they should set an example in their neighborhoods -- clean them up -- toss out the criminals -- call authorities, that didn't go over big!

The powers which be want to keep them enslaved by their own minds ... and believing in boogeymen racists ...

Now, a decade later, or so, the black chamber of commerce is pretty much gone ... my friend is still successful, although suffering the decline in the economy, as we all are, perhaps they should have listened to him?

Wrong, WrongTurnJoe. It is the TRUTH and it has been PROVEN BEYOND DOUBT. Controlled demolition was RULED OUT as a physically impossible thing in these collapses. Not is dispute. you STILL have not NAMED ONE THING in the NIST report that is incorrect.

You cannot even locate one typo in the massive report, that is how correct it is in every respect.

When Government shills run out of defensive material they resort back grammar hangups,They feel they can discredit a post based on its merit of written errors!

This hangup was proggramed into them in the education system directed by their contoling elite.It's like their assignment is to count teephone poles while on their journey following the Gold Brick Road. They think all they have to do is click their heels three times and wish, and all will be well.

It is a fantasy they are living in where when they get raptured they will go to a place where every text is perfect,however they forget the part where if they are doused with water they just simply meltdown.

I dont think my post need to be grammarized,I think they need only be accepted as fact.

“The Constitution is not an instrument for the government to restrain the people, it’s an instrument for the people to restrain the government.” -- Patrick Henry

Ahh that Patric Henry thought the constitution was for the people instead of a tool against the people.What an idiot he was, but he was a great speller!

Perjury

Perjury is lying under oath, usually in a court of law, but also under certain other specific circumstances, such as testifying before Congress (in the U.S.).

The favorite way to avoid perjury in modern times, perfected by Ronald Reagan under the sad influences of "plausible deniability" and Alzheimer's Disease, is to claim to "have no memory".

Gravity is not FTL. It moves at the speed of light. This is why we can speak of gravity waves. If you could observe two black holes orbiting close to one another from within the plane of their orbit you would feel the gravitational field change as each one flew by you.
That changing field radiates outward in a spiral shape aligned with the plane of their orbit.

If the ether exists it is undetectable. If it exists it must be relativistic so that you cannot measure your movement through it.

In any event, the Chinese are walking a -very- fine line. If they screw us, they are hurting their very best customer and shooting themselves in the foot.

If ebay and chinese direct marketing web sites is any indication, they are cutting out the middlemen. Up until now, Americans have benefited in business by buying cheap chinese products then reselling them to us, American citizens and the world ...

This will be ending, its' end happening, even, as I type this ... I think it is going to have major consequences -- the chinese simply are moving to a point where they no longer need us, the world is their customer ... they are the new kid on the block, their industrial age is just beginning as all others have either fallen or are in the process thereof ...

The crystal ball grows darker, dimmer, the future more undefined -- for us ...

I'm not religous at all John Smith this is a tool for the weak-minded to put aside their troubles and rely on their Government to make decisions for them. The Constitution was written by a bunch of potheads fashioned after the Masonic Creed a form of Sunworship in Astrology and mythological Gods!

The Constitution,Dear John is a joke and not worth the hemp paper it was written on!

You cant use a Constitutional Right as a basis for a court proceeding the UCC replaced the Supreme Law Of The Land when we got RAILROADED by Thompkins vrs Erie in 1935.No case law before that date applies anymore!

So you cant protect anyone from the New World Order based on old law! In your case weak-minded does not apply you are simply still under control of CIA Mind Control.The Committee of 300 calls all the shots and you must abide by what they say because you can't afford not to,you have to depend on them for protection from the system$$$$$$$$$$$

Actually, the weak minded are those who think it is and to even begin to think this all just happened ... that must have an immediate answer ... that can't understand we just don't know enough, yet, to understand these questions, let alone the real answers!

Actually, the weak minded are those who think it is anywhere near sane to even begin to think this all "just happened" ... that everything must have an immediate answer ... that they can't understand we just don't know enough, yet, to understand these questions, let alone the real answers!

The ones who set themselves up as rulers, leaders, royalty, etc. have always done so by convincing the weak minded that this is "right", that they have "no choice", that it is "law", that order is needed in the form of masters and slaves, kings and peasants ... in all truth, the weak minded allow themselves to be enslaved, perhaps their dimwits allow them no other choice, perhaps all that is to be done is to pity them ... you demonstrate this so well, that you are a stand alone example of the detail involved ... your rantings being textbook examples! Kind of a "Leader of the Sheep!"

Don't be offended, everybody has to be "something."

I cannot imagine a God who rewards and punishes the objects of his creation, whose purposes are modeled after our own -- a God, in short, who is but a reflection of human frailty. Neither can I believe that the individual survives the death of his body, although feeble souls harbor such thoughts through fear or ridiculous egotisms.

Well, the choice is spontaneous generation. The choice is something we have never seen, in the whole universe.

For a thinking mind to have created complex constructions, that is an example of uncountable occurrences ... indeed, it seems to be a trait of such intelligence ... it is the most obvious answer.

Cause and effect ... without cause, there can be no effect. Unless you have found an example to enlighten us with?

Same as your confused about the Constitution it is history,meaning it has no effect on the present time!

Sunworshippers were chsased out of every country because of this new fangled tool christainity to herd the sheeple!

They formed the government to insure they would not be chased out of society again by religous groups.Their first Article of their Constitution gave them expliciet right to worship the Sun Dietys and astrological Gods.FREEDOM OF RELIGION.

This country belongs to the Freemasons/Knights Templar they have control of the whole earth with their religous beliefs.Isreal is there Shrine,they have a commanding control of every continent,They think there are too many people alive today,this hurdle is to be rectified with the Haig/Kissenger Depopulation Project. Their firs commandment for the New Age of Aquarius is to maintain a population no larger that 500,000,000 people world-wide to balance perpetual Nature!

Thes are to people that are in control of you John Smith.

That wouldn't surprise me a bit. I wonder if Brad believes in a perpetual motion machine?

No, the choice is whether it can be denied whether there is a creator.
I propose that, yes it is possible to deny that there is a creator.
There are sufficient examples of such denial that it shouldn't be a question.

So you don't believe it is possible that something can exist without a creator? Then obviously, you don't believe that the Creator exists without an even greater creator before Him.

One thing which your text proves to me, you are a religious nutjob!

Because your religion doesn't involve any recognizable religious figures, you wish to think of it differently, and you can ...

But, it is what it is ... krist, you are building up enough material in your insane rants that you will be able to create a bible out of just your posts here!

Followers shouldn't be a problem, their are nutjobs to match you and worse available!

With our present state of knowledge, we cannot know the origin of the creator of our universe. Indeed, there is much greater amount we don't know, then the amount we do.

But, except for an insane desire to do different, it is impossible to deny a creator with our present state of knowledge ... and is likely to remain here for many, many, human lifetimes ...

So yes, if that is your point, I do consider all who have the intellect to examine this mystery and still deny a creator to be insane or bent on denial for some perceived personal purposes ... it is simply, like, DUH!

No effect can be found without a cause ...

Hmmm....

I just have to comment, that until we 'saw' it there was a lot in the universe that we didn't know about.

Germs Atoms
Electrons
Speeds faster than sound
Space flight

To suggest that we have 'seen' absolutely everything in the universe seems a bit self centered don't you think?

It would be like an amoeba in a drop of water that people don't exist because no amoeba currently alive in that drop of water can say they've seen a person, and there is no definitive proof that no amoeba in the past ever did either.

So whether there is or isn't a "creator" is up for debate, but your logic isn't going to hold up unless you can establish that at some time, and provable to everyone satisfaction, that everything in the universe that exists has been 'seen' and understood by someone.

According to you, if a tree fell in the forest and no one was around, it didn't fall and there isn't even a tree because no one saw it.

Because your religion doesn't involve any recognizable religious figures, you wish to think of it differently, and you can ...

But, it is what it is ... krist, you are building up enough material
in
your posts here!

Who is this "krist" you speak of Jonh Smith is it a religous figure is it the same as Krist Kringle?

Spell check shit#2 TIA

True, but it should be noted that in the final analysis the reasons for denial of a creator are the exact same as those reason to believe in one.
Specifically personal belief and/or faith.

Objectively there is no conclusive evidence either way.

The fact is, there is no example of effect without cause, of "something" coming from "nothing", of anything "just happening" ...

So, to argue that it might be possible and we haven't just haven't managed to see it or become aware of it, that possibility must be left open ...

However, it puts a CAUSE as being the most possible and most acceptable, whatever that CAUSE is, we can call it the creator, at least until we know a better term ...

And, again, unless for some preconceived ideas/concepts or beliefs which force a person to do different. I simply have none ...

I did not say that there was not a creator! On the contrary I believe in Creation.I believe Man Created God in his own image! I do however believe Man was not created I believe IT evolved.Darwin has not been prooven wrong yet unless you allow Limprod to declare it a Physilogical impossibility!

NIST should jump in there anytime now and say what man built man can tear it down even if they have to use controlled demolition!

Kerosene just wont get the job done it just fizzels away or runs down the outside of the buildings,but it has been know to burn up the wick in a lantern if left unattended overnight

Are you saying it's not possible because we've managed to check all of the universe for it?

Sorry, but the term creator implies an entity being involved. If it's all just the result of natural occurrences and random chance with no entity involved then there is no creator.

And yet you've stated you have some preconceived ideas/concepts or beliefs.

Its not green tea leaves John is smoking.Nastrodamus and our favorite detective Sherlock Homes had visions,these visions were a result of there dependancy on opium while in their stupor they came up with some good shit, like our dopeheaded fore fathers while writing the Constitution.

Holmes was deliberately ODed for solving the jack the ripper case. He found in one of his visions that the Royal Family CREATED jack the ripper to cover up the sexual habits of the prince making out with common whores,when incest was their goal. What if one of them whores gave birth to an heir to the throne?

You have to be gentle with John Smith he believes the Constitution was not a copy of the Mosonic/Jesuit Creed.
He also believes that there is a Supeior Being that will recue him from torment!
Well I too believe their is a Superior Being. I believe that the Monkey is far Superior to Man.The Monkey has made it to the moon,the Monkey can point and grunt and monkeys alover the world have a universal language,They can understand one another from Hong Cong to Japan without worrying about spelling errors. The Monkey is soo Superior to Man that Man uses them test pilots. Funny how Man did not learn its lesson with the test pilots when they were roasted alive upon returning to the Earths Atmoshere without a heat Shield(Area 51).

The Monkey has won the space race and prooven Man to be incompetent.

This is where me and Darwin are at odds,Darwin thinks that The Monkey was a previous stage in evolution!

I think that our next step in evolution will become growing a tail and swinging from limb to limb.Our next step in Evolution has to be a better brain and universal understanding as the winner of the space race,The Almighty Monkey.Then we can do as we see.Monkey See Monkey Do.

Your unsupported assertion dies not constitute proof, Gary.

Come back when you can provide _proof_ of those assertions.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

So you are now officially denying cheating on your

But that doesn't add anything to the discussion to hypothesize one more level of creation. What does that give us? Either there is a creator which doesn't need to be created - in which case that logic is invalid, or it's just one more step in an infinity of steps. (The ocean made the cloud made the rain made the river made the ocean).

It's turtles all the way down.

Yeah, now you are waking up, the problem is much more serious than the one you wish to draw in the sand and focus on.

First you have to realize that something caused all we see, that what we see is only an effect of the important action/event.

You demonstrate the problem of telling children, "Don't worry about it."
As, one day they wake up, with everything all wrong, late in life, and

PERJURY

When a person, having taken an oath before a competent tribunal, officer, or person, in any case in which a law of the U.S. authorizes an oath to be administered, that he will testify, declare, depose, or certify truly, or that any written testimony, declaration, deposition, or certificate by him subscribed, is true, willfully and contrary to such oath states or subscribes any material matter which he does not believe to be true; or in any declaration, certificate, verification, or statement under penalty of perjury, willfully subscribes as true any material matter which he does not believe to be true; 18 USC

In order for a person to be found guilty of perjury the government must prove: the person testified under oath before [e.g., the grand jury]; at least one particular statement was false; and the person knew at the time the testimony was false.

The testimony of one witness is not enough to support a finding that the testimony was false. There must be additional evidence, either the testimony of another person or other evidence, which tends to support the testimony of falsity. The other evidence, standing alone, need not convince that the testimony was false, but all the evidence on the subject must do so.

-http://www.lectlaw.com/def2/p032.htm

OK, Gary; using the above LEGAL definition of "perjury," prove that Ronaldus Maximus commotted perjury.

Making an assertion is easy for you, Gary; let's see if you are capable of assembling a criminal case to support that assertion.

Remember, Gary: in order to obtain a conviction you must prove your case "beyond all reasonable doubt."

"Well; we're WAITING!" -Judge Elihu Smails

I wouldn't say backfired, they seem to have taken all the wealth ... I'd say you are looking at a very successful plan.

Damn soon we are going to be looking at garbage cans full of dollar bills and watching masses of people glean the lands looking for something to eat ... we have now reached the point where thing grow more interesting every day, and every day only brings a list naming new problems, with no previous problems having been fixed. We approach the "straw which broke the camels' back."

Americans rate Reagan best U.S. president

Gallup, in a poll released Friday, asked 1,015 adults to name the president they regard as the greatest in history.

Ronald Reagan finished first at 19 percent, followed by Abraham Lincoln at 14 percent and Bill Clinton at 13 percent.

One of three presidents — Lincoln, Reagan or Kennedy — has been on top the past 12 years.
The poll was conducted from Feb. 2-5. The margin of error was plus or minus 4 percent.

Yeah, I don't believe a word of it, only morons would not recognize that raygun was/is the beginning of everything you now see happening, it was he who tore off all the controls, and in his words, "time to turn the bull loose."

Well, now that the bull has destroyed good jobs, decent wages, sufficient retirement, medical, etc. see how you like your new digs!

Maybe it is thing with morons, they will live in a dump and count their blessings ...

You're sure doing a lot of whining about Weiner.

How odd that I don't remember you saying anything at all against David Vitter (R)-Louisiana who committed an arguably worse crime than Weiner.

Any reason you had no comment on Vitter? Blind partisanship? Selective memory? Hypocrisy?

You must be taking your cue from Eric Cantor (R)-Virginia who said:

a) "We should pray for Mr. Vitter's family".

b) "Weiner should resign".

You presumably have some intelligence, so don't you detect just the slightest bit of hypocrisy here?

Ol' Joe from Kokomo says Weiner should resign...right after Vitter does. What could be more fair than that, hmmmm?

The bushkultie isn't permitted to think.

The bushkultie can't prove it'd be true, of course.

The official story of 9/11 is a fabrication that would never hold up in court.

The bushkultie can't recognize much less understand them,
but they remain nonetheless.

The glaring errors of the NIST 9/11 fiasco remain undisputed.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal
Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

"I would like to assure the world that I did not plan the recent attacks, which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons,"
bin Laden's statement said."

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

The bushkultie doesn't believe in actual admissible evidence.

The bushworshipper is so uncivilized as to prefer

It's not difficult to fool a bushkultie.

The bushworshipper has been tricked repeatedly.

The bushkultie is pitied, while a useful example.

The bushkultie is a mere dupe.

The bushworshipper was fooled easily by faked videos.

Others could see the discrepancies quite clearly.

The real perps were 'incompetent' all the way to their

The claim of "incompetence" is ludicrous.

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at Midway, it was the work of Tiltman -- only a few weeks after it came into use in 1939."

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before

Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to "Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

Always wanted a "glass-bottom boat".

Unlike yourself, when a private owned vessel needs something that I can offer, I actually delivered good value and afterwords didn't have to run and hide myself inside of some dank and smelly trailer park under a bogus name.

The biggest mistakes that I've made is that I didn't stand up for myself, which lead clients to getting screwed by those that were always pissed that anyone else was independently involved between the client and access to his bank account, because they obviously wanted full exclusive access with no possible intervention by independents like myself. So I was technically bullied away or indirectly excluded whenever they could manage.

btw; I only got paid by check, so there's no lack of paper trails on my part. Although I know of shipyards and few individuals that accepted cash-cash with no questions asked. Of course I have no way of knowing if they paid any associated sales or income tax on that cash-cash loot, but according to rednecks like yourself, they're all perfectly honest folks exactly like yourself.

Your redneck approved government basically destroyed 90+% of the private boating market (especially of the middle and low-end investments), most of which was made up of active middle class families with 2+ kids and a dog (some having a cat) that stuck together as a team that went lots of places with their boats. Nowadays, 95% of the private power boats sit as moorage placeholders with near empty fuel tanks, and/or as part of some foreclosure. I know a few higher-end yacht owners with extremely powerful big yachts that hardly ever go anywhere, and when they travel by boat is always at minimal speed (not much above idle in order to get roughly 0.5 nm/gallon, with their big engine turbochargers actually creating a slight vacuum instead of offering any boost ).

As I always like to say, it's your story and you can tell it any way you want to.

PS: with as much time as you spend here, you can't be all that sought-after by the marine community ...

Thanks, I'll look into that, because it seems mainstream physics and whatever science hasn't picked up on this force velocity or propagation of gravity as being any done deal.

"Several physicists, including Clifford M. Will and Steve Carlip, have criticized these claims on the grounds that they have allegedly misinterpreted the results of their measurements. Notably, prior to the actual transit, Hideki Asada in a paper to the Astrophysical Journal Letters theorized that the proposed experiment was essentially a roundabout confirmation of the speed of light instead of the speed of gravity."

I suppose that more than a few others of sufficient expertise have interpreted this gravity force velocity in ways that haven't been accepted or otherwise peer replicated.

How could the speed of light even exist unless gravity wasn't worth at least twice as fast?

Unlike your FUD-master self, I got nothing to gain or lose by fudging either way.

The folks that I've worked for (including most current clients have often been Jewish and/or otherwise devoutly faith-based because it helps them deal with everyday matters and self improvement issues), know that I'm outspoken and critical about mainstream religion and politics, whereas yourself remain as a paid brown-nosed clown or minion that does only whatever your FUD-masters tell you to do, which obviously doesn't require any individual deductive thinking on your part.

It's not my fault that so many Jews (republican, democrat or independent) seem to be getting themselves and others into trouble, and even so often unable to resolve matters of their personal lives, homes and yachts that were caused by the very same selfish greed and/or special interest motivated actions of others they typically have to associate with.

Most of their boats/yachts are terribly energy inefficient and technically not even sufficiently seaworthy or all that serviceable because of the relatively piss-poor decisions made extensively by others of their own kind.

How is it my fault when I advise clients of a proper set of energy efficient, relatively smooth and quiet main and auxiliary engines, along with a proper set of other accessories plus really good alternators plus a sufficiently sized and good quality battery bank for their inverter/UPS that'll actually do the job, if they turn to their good buddies for taking their advise and buying only back-door stuff as based entirely upon its untaxed dealer/wholesale (where-is as-is) rock bottom cheapness or superficial look that seldom if ever does whatever was required, and never is simple to use and/or gets impossible to service. Do you think it's still my fault that their boats end up being super spendy, inefficient, unreliable and even unsafe to use?

If I'd told you a reasonably proper way of doing things and you said screw that, whereas instead doing it in your usual redneck cheap-ass know-it-all way because you didn't want anyone as an outsider making an honest dime off of you. How is it my fault when it either doesn't integrate properly, is overly complicated and works either inefficiently or poorly, if not at all?

I dunno, do you really think a commercial transaction between an adult male and an adult female is worse than sending pictures of your junk to anonymous women on the internet and putting yourself in a position to be blackmailed and oh BTW one of his cuties, at least one of which was 17 yo making him a sexual predator?

For the record, I hope the arrogant bastard doesn't resign. Of course if the morons in his district reelect him, he's still good for 5 to 10 seats overall on the digust issue. Hell, he may even end up in Fort Marcy Park.

Back in the 1950s, I used to watch them Grey Ghost tee vee series movies.I think they were called Grey Ghost.

Those Yankees uniforms were actually Grey, bit they were dyed blue.Didn't take too long for those blue Yankee uniforms to start going back to Grey color, ergo the quality of dyes wayyyyyy back then wasen't worth a sheet.

I bet them Yankees changed their uniforms often, or had them redyed once in a while.

There is also the fact that sending probes into the outer solar system, repeatedly slingshotting around planets involves precise calculations which take into account the speed of gravity equalling c. If the speed were to be significantly different, the probes would not end up where they were supposed to be.

1382. Strategies to defeat drone technology when Obama orders attacks on American citizens.

Pentagon Leaks Classified Predator Drone Vulnerabilities

Classified details of vulnerabilities to the Predator drones were leaked from Pentagon scientists attending an optics conference at the Universidad de Blinde in Venice, Italy. The papers were left inadvertently at a table where attendees were discussing red shift variables and distance factoring as it relates to light waves.

The classified papers describe how the simple tool of using 3D glasses is allowing terrorists in Iraq and Afghanistan to actually see the Predator and other US drones as they fly at altitudes of up to 30,000 feet. Because of the unique nature inherent in the shift of various wavelengths of light, at these distances the subtle coatings painted on the drones, when viewed through the filter of bi-colored lenses such as any common pair of 3D glasses, cause the drone to become distinguishable from the background hues of the atmosphere.

Cpl. Tonya Marks of the 1st Rcon, 2nd Battl. USMC operating out of Baalz, Afghanistan said, "Its the damnedest thing. We're out patrolling in the middle of nowhere and come up to a village and see a couple of insurgents wearing like, 3D glasses. I was thinking- where's the drive in, you know." The patrol discovered that the insurgents were able to time their transfers of supplies and men to windows of opportunity in the day when they observe that the drones are not operating overhead. This technique has spread to the theatre in Iraq as well. Recently military specialists interrogated an insurgent who was operating in the border area close to Iran where supply lines often trail through the empty desert lands. Fuq al aJousef defiantly crowed about his abilities to counter the intelligence gathering drones, "With these glasses I can soar higher than the eagles, these glasses are the wind beneath my wings to fight the infidel oppressors."

It is fairly simple to obtain the glasses. Recent editions of Time, and National Geographic for example have included complimentary pairs. Even blockbuster movies such as Chicken Little have seen free glasses handed out to viewers at theaters in Baghdad. Pentagon spokesmen refused to comment on the leak other than to say, " we remain committed to protecting our troops, protecting our nation, and thwarting the bad guys with the full multi-dimensional capabilities of the United States military."

http://harvardnsj.com/2010/02/nsj-analysis-increasing-use-of-unmanned-drones-raises-data-security-issues/

As part of the continuing war in Afghanistan, the United States has made extensive use of unmanned Predator drones to carry out reconnaissance as well as armed strikes. On Monday The New York Times reported that a U.S. drone killed three militants in North Waziristan, and on Friday CNN reported that a Haqqani network commander was killed in a drone strike. The use of unmanned aircraft is likely to continue expanding: The Washington Post reports that the U.S. Army Space and Missile Defense Command continues to search for a dedicated unmanned intelligence-gathering airship. Although drones can ensure mission capability while avoiding casualties, they are not perfect.

Drones raise unique security issues as their data streams, and possibly control streams, must be secured. Unlike a manned airplane controlled from a cockpit and generally involving a closed system of control, a drone is often remote-controlled through a two-way data stream carried over sometimes thousands of miles. Such data streams can be vulnerable to hacking, like any computer network. According to the Wall Street Journal, in December 2009, militants in Iraq were able to hack a drone's video feed using low cost off-the-shelf software. While there was no evidence that the militants were able to take control of the drone, they were able to download and see the drone's video feed, perhaps allowing them to evade U.S. operations.

The stark difference between resource requirements between the militant hackers and the U.S. military is telling. While Reaper drones like the one hacked can cost over $10 million, the militants used a computer program that cost around $25. The low cost of the program allows militants to proliferate the software and thereby increase the danger that drones can be hacked and their video feeds watched by enemy forces.

The ability of militants in Iraq to hack drone video feeds should be cause for concern, especially as far more advanced military forces such as Russia and China have extensive cyber-warfare capabilities. While Iraqi militants relied on cheap software to capture a video feed, other states' capabilities could conceivably allow a foreign force to hijack a drone, either to alter the mission or crash the drone before the mission can be completed. Increased reliance on drone warfare will also increase the opportunities for enemy cyber-warfare units to hack or hijack the unmanned vehicles.

U.S. drone vulnerability stems from the fact that once a drone is far from its base, satellite uplinks are necessary to link the drone to the base. Such uplinks are vulnerable to hacking, unless the data stream is encrypted. But the drones' data stream is unencrypted, and unless significant expenditures are made to add encryption to the proprietary satellite technology, the vulnerability will remain. The unencrypted data stream vulnerability carries over to other U.S. satellite traffic, as a 2005 CIA report describes. While the control data stream of drones is encrypted, the ability of enemies to access U.S. drone intelligence seriously undermines the ability of the United States to use that intelligence for mission purposes.

U.S. drone vulnerabilities have been known to the U.S. military since at least the 1999 Yugoslav war. Whether it was bureaucratic indifference or inertia, the problem was not addressed. Most worrying, U.S. commanders may have seriously underestimated the ingenuity and technical proficiency of militants. If this is so, it must be hoped that the same commanders will not continue to underestimate the threat to drone data-gathering and control posed by a lack of data stream security. Only by addressing this security hole can the ever-growing drone force be considered a fully functional weapon of war, useful in all possible conflicts and with a varied mission profile.

It's time to start forming defensive strategies against the Obama administration and their intended use of drone technology against Americans. Such strategies should include detection, signal jamming, use of recreational hobbyist aircraft to attack, lasers and rocketry.

Pay close attention here, Gary:

"In order for a person to be found guilty of perjury the government must prove: the person testified under oath before [e.g., the grand jury]; at least one particular statement was false; and the person knew at the time the testimony was false."

What is your evidence to prove that, IF, as you claim, Reagan made false statements to a grand jury, that he KNEW the statements were false.

GOTCHA! <snicker>

You still offer ZERO proof, Gary; just more unsupported assertions.

First: Ronald Wilson Reagan died at his home in Bel Air, California on the afternoon of Saturday, June 5, 2004, so why in the world are you writing in the present tense???

Second: Care to show ANY statute that prevents the indictment, prosecution and conviction of a sitting POTUS?

Third: Ronald Reagan's approval ratings:

What "clear and present danger test"?

The Constitution of the United States
Article II - The Executive Branch
Section 4 - Disqualification

The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.

Don't find "clear and present danger" here, Gary.

I didn't see any evidence of his being " drooling idiot" while he was in office, Gary; unlike you who demonstrate almost daily to your being a "droolong Yoorghis IDIOT."

You are confusing the force of gravity with the velocity of gravity.

That’s like confusing the brightness or intensity of a given light bulb with the speed of light that’s always a variable because the in between medium is always a variable and/or distorted by the quicker velocity and/or propagation of gravity.

If a constant magnet force is moving away a 0.1%c; is its force at any given distance going to be stronger or weaker than a stationary magnet? (same question applies to gravity)

This science of physics proof pertaining to the velocity of a given force such as gravity should be accomplished within a physics lab, and thereby easily peer replicated.

Reagan has been out of office going 23 years and has been dead for some time. Or haven't you read a newspaper lately?

In Reagan's case nobody thought there was a case. Which may explain why the Democrat controlled House didn't impeach him, stupid.

> Reagan also lied to congress

Even were I to stipulate to the truth of that, what is your point. Every President lies to Congress. Ever hear of Bull Clinton.

And, oh yeah, how's the war in Libya and the secret war in Yemen working out?

You think that a President lieing to Congress regarding foreign policy does not fit the "clear and present danger" test? Are you like 3? Oh wait you're a Dumbocrat!

A drooling idiot that smoked the Dems in 2 Presdential elections, left the economy in much better condition than he found it and oh yeah, drove our sorn enemy of the Cold War into the ground, without a general war.

I'll take more drooling idiots like that anytime.

It's a pity you have your head shoved up your partisan ass so far. Or maybe not. If you sneeze maybe you can blowout a hemmoroid and bleed out quickly.

You're angry becuase your chikldish and warped vsioin of the how the woprld should be has been proven to be a disaster and your drooling isiot of a hero is going to repudated in 2012.

So, FUD-masters and ZNR/GOP rednecks are not allowed to speak of anything investigative by William Mook. Message received loud and clear.

The speed of gravity is the speed at which gravitational force propagates.
Is an object pulled in the direction where a mass is currently seen to be (in which case the 'speed of gravity' is the speed of light) or is it pulled in the direction where it currently 'is' (in which case the 'speed of gravity' is infinite)?
The observed answer to the above question is that the speed of gravity is c.

If objects are travelling at speeds at which relativistic effects become significant, then the effective mass changes and thus the gravitational effects change, but this has nothing to do with the 'speed of gravity'.

No Brad Guth, Brad_Guth, Brad.Guth, BradGuth, BG / ï¿½Guth Usenetï¿½, you missed the message completely!

The message was... you were asked a question. Sane people, when asked a question, respond with an answer, not an assertion.

Please try again.

We now know what FUD is.

What is ZNR (I seem to remember it's something about Zionists and Nazis)?

Who is William Mook?

And why should anyone care?

I thought I would share with you some themes on today's amazing feast of Pentecost:

God created the world in 7 days, man was created on the 6th day with the beasts of the earth, one reason the last book of the Bible, Revelation says that 666 is the mark of the beast, is that man remains a beast unless He rests in God on the 7th day. We are created to love and know God and to rest in His love, to follow and worship him and obeying His commandments and to imitate His Son Jesus Christ.

One reason the 3rd Commandment is to go to Mass on Sunday and Rest on Sunday, is to offer God the worship which is due to Him, the adoration He asks us to give Him, He actually gives the perfect way to worship Him, through the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, in which the Son is offering Himself to His Father, in the Holy Spirit, in an unbloody and sacramental way. Thus, Mass is the same sacrifice of Calvary under the appearance of bread and wine, which is truly the Body, blood, soul and divinity of Jesus Christ.

There are 10 commandments, the first 3 deal with God (1. Himself, 2. His name 3. His day) and the last 7 commandments deal with loving our neighbor (4.Honor Parents 5. Do not kill 6. Do not commit adultery, the rest: do not lie, steal, envy your neighbor's wife/husband or goods). So a summary of the law and commandments, is to love God and to love your neighbor as yourself.
The cross is vertical, love of God and the cross is horizontal, to love our neighbors.

There are 7 sacraments.

There are 7 gifts of the Holy Spirit

There are 7 capital sins

The number 7 is the perfect number because in Hebrew, to SEVEN oneself, means to swear an oath to God.

If God is the greatest thing, then the study and knowledge of God is the greatest, the most liberating and important truths...

Truth with love is cruelty....

Love with truth is a lie....

Jesus Christ is way, the TRUTH, and the life...

The Holy Spirit is Love....

We're on the way!

Here's the news that will have Republican wannabees drop their bid and run for cover:

EXCERPT: Rising exports, stable fuel prices, record levels of cash in company coffers and easier lending rules will be enough to overcome the damage done by one-time events like poor weather and the disaster in Japan, economists said.

Nonetheless, the current slackening means Federal Reserve policy makers will wait even longer to raise interest rates next year, the survey shows.

http://www.bloomberg.com/news/print/2011-06-10/growth-rebound-for-u-s-seen-in-second-half-of-2011-in-economists-survey.html

Growth Rebound for U.S. Seen in Second Half of 2011 in Economists' Survey By Carlos Torres and Alex Tanzi - Jun 10, 2011

Slowdowns in consumer spending and employment will prove temporary, giving way to a U.S. growth rebound in the second half of 2011, economists surveyed by Bloomberg News said.

After growing at a 2.3 percent annual pace this quarter, the world's largest economy will expand at a 3.2 percent rate from July through December, according to the median forecast of 67 economists polled from June 1 to June 8.

Rising exports, stable fuel prices, record levels of cash in company coffers and easier lending rules will be enough to overcome the damage done by one-time events like poor weather and the disaster in Japan, economists said. Nonetheless, the current slackening means Federal Reserve policy makers will wait even longer to raise interest rates next year, the survey shows.

"The economic headwinds are well known, but if you look at the tailwinds, they are still pretty strong," said Nariman Behravesh, chief economist at IHS Inc. in Lexington, Massachusetts. "There are a lot of reasons to be fairly upbeat about the recovery. Growth will pick up in the second half."

The projected gain in second-quarter gross domestic product is down a percentage point from the 3.3 percent estimated last month. At the same time, this month's forecast for the second half of the year was little changed from May's prediction of an average 3.35 percent.

For all of 2011, the U.S. will grow 2.5 percent, down from the 2.7 percent gain projected last month. The rate of growth will accelerate to 3 percent for the next two years, the survey showed.
Stocks Decline

The Standard & Poor's 500 Index has slid about 5 percent from its 2011 high on April 29, reflecting the cooling economy. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note has declined to 3 percent from 3.29 percent in the same period. Economists forecast the yield will rise to 3.65 percent in the fourth quarter, down from a prior estimate of 3.8 percent.

A slowdown in hiring is among reasons for short-term pessimism. Employers boosted payrolls by 54,000 workers in May after a 232,000 increase the prior month, figures from the Labor Department showed last week. The jobless rate climbed to 9.1 percent from 9 percent in April.

"Credit conditions continue to improve and labor income is growing, even with a bit of a pause in May, and we think that gives the economy enough momentum to carry us though the soft patch," said Samuel Coffin, an economist at UBS Securities LLC in Stamford, Connecticut.

Corporate Cash

Companies had a record $1.91 trillion in cash and other liquid assets at the end of the first quarter, according to Fed data issued yesterday. The money will probably be used to boost capital investment and hiring later this year once concern over the slowdown dissipates, said IHS's Behravesh.

Consumer spending, which accounts for about 70 percent of the economy, will grow at an average 2.95 percent in the second half of the year after increasing at a 2.1 percent rate this quarter, according to the survey median.

Auto sales slumped last month, in part reflecting a shortage of vehicles from Japanese manufacturers following the earthquake and tsunami. Cars and light trucks sold at an 11.8 million annual rate, down 11 percent from 13.1 million in April, according to industry data.

Ford Motor Co. Chief Executive Officer Alan Mulally said this week that while the economy is the automaker's main concern, he expects conditions to improve in the second half of the year.

Biggest Concern

"Our biggest concern of course is that the economy has slowed a little bit from where we thought it would be," Mulally said in a June 7 Bloomberg Television interview. "Having said that, most of the economists believe that it's going to start picking up in the second half with everything that's been put in place, both monetarily and fiscally."

Ford, the second-largest U.S. automaker, said its global sales will rise 50 percent by 2015 to 8 million vehicles a year as it delivers more small cars and boosts revenue in Asia.

Increasing overseas demand is another reason for optimism, economists said. Exports climbed to a record in April, Commerce Department figures showed yesterday, reflecting a 10 percent drop in the value of the dollar over the past 12 months, according to a Fed gauge, and expansions in emerging markets.

Forecasts for a second-half rebound are in synch with Fed Chairman Ben S. Bernanke's views. Bernanke this week said growth is likely to pick up as fuel prices recede and disruptions in parts supplies dissipate with Japanese factories recovering.
'Moderate Pace'

"Overall, the economic recovery appears to be continuing at a moderate pace, albeit at a rate that is both uneven across sectors and frustratingly slow from the perspective of millions of unemployed and underemployed workers," Bernanke said in a June 7 speech in Atlanta.

Concern over the pace of improvement in the labor market means the central bank's first rate increase will take place in the second quarter of 2012, rather than in the first three months of the year, according to the survey median.

Not all economists are convinced the slowdown will be short-lived.

"The labor market is disappointing," said Joshua Shapiro, chief U.S. economist at Maria Fiorini Ramirez Inc. in New York, who cut his GDP forecasts for each of the last three quarters of the year. "Small businesses are increasingly worried about the future and that is where the job growth is going to have to come from." The dearth of jobs last month "really caught my attention and that made me think we were experiencing more deep- seated problems," he said.

Right from the Republican play book!

"We Republicans were dismal failures so weï¿½ll spread the word that Democrats Democrats are not the same.

We know how to run governments.

"congratulations for your willingness to look at the proof about 9-11"

http://www.911proof.com/

Notice that the bushkultie won't be able to address
any of the facts from the above site at all.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

"I would like to assure the world that I did not plan the recent attacks, which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons,"
bin Laden's statement said."

http://articles.cnn.com/2001-09-16/us/inv.binladen.denial_1_bin-laden-taliban-supreme-leader-mullah-mohammed-omar?_s=PM:US

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and
disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

Notice that the bushkultie must ignore this fact, too.

Of course you can't name one item of admissible evidence
that would exculpate your neocon idols, bushkultie.

Of course you can't name one item of admissible evidence
that would exculpate your neocon idols, bushkultie.

So what's your excuse for your inability to insist on a valid trial for the most horrific crime of this millenium to date?

>kooker...

That is your best excuse.

Of course you hate America when you insist that those who murder Americans should not be prosecuted
according to the rule of law.

Notice that you can't name one thing that would be admissible evidence against the scapegoat chosen
by your fascist masters.

The bushkultie has no admissible evidence, and doesn't even know what it is.

You always do.

The bushkultie doesn't believe in actual admissible evidence.

The bushworshipper is so uncivilized as to prefer
assassinations to trials.

It's not difficult to fool a bushkultie.

The bushworshipper has been tricked repeatedly.

The bushkultie is pitied, while a useful example.

The bushkultie is a mere dupe.

The bushworshipper was fooled easily by faked videos.

Others could see the discrepancies quite clearly.

The real perps were 'incompetent' all the way to their offshore accounts.

The claim of "incompetence" is ludicrous.

"...incompetence cannot explain the suppression of efforts to prevent the attacks."

Well this is EXACTLY what happened. The very people with established motives for conducting an event like the one that took place on 9/11/2001 were responsible for national security when we had that most unlikely, unrealistic and implausible complete catastrophic failure of every single defense procedure in operation."

http://www.tvnewslies.org/html/smoking_gun.html

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before

Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

http://www.army.mil/cmh-pg/brochures/pi/pi.htm

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to "Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

http://www.freerepublic.com/forum/a3a3522a943db.html

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

Still.

Of course.

Not one contradictory fact has been presented.

Bush and Cheney are fascists, traitors, and war criminals,

If it's electronic, it's no election.

Make a note of that.

It's significant.

It's undisputed.

The bushkultie can't address any of these issues.

The bushkultie has no facts.

The bushkultie has only lies.

It's obvious.

Yet the bushkultie isn't permitted to consider it.

Trust me, I tried telling them but obviously I wasn't selling it like I should have. I wouldn't make a very good motivational speaker because, I'm not that good at taking rejection, especially when I'm in mixed company. Perhaps I should have taken acting lessons, plus a little song and dance so that I could be more believable.

Actually, faith-based folks have been more trustworthy than Atheists clients, so they have to be going something right.

Sending sexually suggestive material to a child?

That would indeed be a crime, if he had done so. There is absolutely nothing at this point to show that he has. The police were at the home of the girl after a report of her e-mailing with Weiner, but both the girl and her parents denied that anything like sexting occurred, and that only legitimate correspondence was made between the girl and the representative.

Yes it does. How much does +/- 0.1c (+/- 300 km/sec) affect or skew the propagation of gravity?

Are you saying that gravitons exist? (perhaps as extremely low frequency photons)

If gravitons exist, then how many trillions upon trillions upon trillions of those gravitons exist per cm3?

Well, that is why I asked. I can't find any actual proof myself ... but then, I am not looking that hard ... the claims that fellow public

So, then you have failed to notice that obama is as dismal a failure as bush, if not greater, also, but most certainly his equal, and apparently using the same play book?

You're sure doing a lot of whining about Weiner.

How odd that I don't remember you saying anything at all against David Vitter (R)-Louisiana who committed an arguably worse crime than Weiner. Any reason you had no comment on Vitter? Blind partisanship? Selective memory? Hypocrisy?

You must be taking your cue from Eric Cantor (R)-Virginia who said:

a) "We should pray for Mr. Vitter's family".

b) "Weiner should resign".

You presumably have some intelligence, so don't you detect just the slightest bit of hypocrisy here?

Ol' Joe from Kokomo says Weiner should resign...right after Vitter does. What could be more fair than that, hmmmm?

So, citing bad behavior justifies more bad behavior. Yep, makes perfect sense.

I think what Brenda pointed out is correct, there seems to be no proof of weiners weiner having done anything inappropriate.

Do you have any links claiming to have any evidence? I don't think there is any problem in us going where the evidence leads, but like Brenda, I think we should first view evidence and establish it is valid before jumping to conclusions ... I mean there is that bit of troubling ethics and moral requirements, "... innocent until proven guilty ..."

The speed or propagation of gravity probably does not affect space travel, although billions of galaxies and perhaps the bulk of mass within our universe has been supposedly moving away from us at near
c. Go figure.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

You're a snarky boy. You're male - nominally - and due to your immaturity, you're a boy, and due to your snarky, wet-behind-the-ears
juvenile demeanor, you're a snarky boy - live with it, boy.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

The main scream news is NOT giving us enough data and warnings, they are risking our lives in just what they are NOT telling us.

Our streets are becoming open theaters to the acts of mobs of thugs who are a real danger to property and persons.

I think it is behooving of people to make note of the type of individuals, their behaviors and other telltale signs of actions which signify the dangers and report them quickly. It would also be wise to have discussed these developments and dangers with your family and friends and be aware of your surroundings and to be prepared to protect yourself and those around you and in your company.

It is simply time to be prepared and to be aware of the elements which are the cause of these increased dangers ...

True, the real sickos are the ones giving money and supporting cruds like him on the ballots, it is the "closet sickos" who are behind the curtain with which we need to begin applying the cure for our problems on.

Or, simply, they will just find another whacko to run for office and groom and position him/her ... and, this will be a reoccurring problem until fixed, permanently.

Property crimes include burglary, larceny-theft, and motor vehicle theft. Arson is also a property crime, but data for arson are not included in property crime totals. Figures for 2010 indicated that arson decreased 8.3 percent when compared to 2009 figures.

Huh? What success? 14.3 trillion dollar debt? 9.3% unemployment. Forcing GM dealers to close to save union thugs? Involving us in 2 more unconstitutional wars - Libya and Yemen?

No more successes please, they are killing us!

Too bad you are not explaining that to those who have been raped, murdered, assaulted, are victims of theft and crime, etc.

I am sure they would just be able to ignore it all, if only you could explain your opinions to them ...

Yes, government reports are not worth the paper they are printed on, all I have to do is speak to the cops on the street, see the crimes in my newspaper and see what is going on about me ... I have had to avoid whole sections of my city due to violence and crimes ... that FBI report is surely speaking of some area in a far away land!

Now, I missed it, what part of all those posts of yours is proof I am a stupid racist unfairly blaming negros and their anger for the damage, dangers and losses in the video (and you can find a whole hell of a lot more damning videos with a simple search, I actually posted a pretty light weight one!)

General Motors Poised to take Global Sales Lead from Toyota

General Motors is now in position to reclaim the top spot in worldwide auto sales from Toyota. Fewer than 24 months have passed since GM was forced to declare bankruptcy and seek out a federal bailout in order to stay in business, but during that time a number of factors have conspired to put the General back in charge of its own destiny.

According to an article posted by Automotive News, one of the least surprising contributors to GMï¿½s fast-approaching global sales lead has more to do with Toyotaï¿½s stumbles than the domestic automakerï¿½s success.

Hey, I think it is great he only gave away 14 billion to get that bit of

He could have gave away much more like he did to banksters and wall street!

Language isn't your first language, is it?

You keep saying "commercial transaction", but you conveniently overlook the fact that it was an ILLEGAL commercial transaction. You also don't address the ethical violations of his (legal) marriage contract.

Sending pictures is not illegal. Perverted? Maybe. Unethical? Maybe.
Illegal? No.

Not really. At least he claims the 17 yr old web contact was not sexual.
In any event, it sounded like all the web 'conversations' were mutual, hardly putting it in the "predator" category.

All I am pointing out is the hypocrisy of Vitter still being on the job. BOTH should go.

"congratulations for your willingness to look at the proof about 9-11"

http://www.911proof.com/

Notice that the bushkultie won't be able to address
any of the facts from the above site at all.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

"I would like to assure the world that I did not plan the recent attacks, which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons,"
bin Laden's statement said."

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

Notice that the bushkultie must ignore this fact, too.

Of course you hate America when you insist that those

The bushkultie doesn't believe in actual admissible evidence.

The bushworshipper is so uncivilized as to prefer
assassinations to trials.

It's not difficult to fool a bushkultie.

The bushworshipper has been tricked repeatedly.

The bushkultie is pitied, while a useful example.

The bushkultie is a mere dupe.

The bushworshipper was fooled easily by faked videos.

Others could see the discrepancies quite clearly.

The real perps were 'incompetent' all the way to their offshore accounts.

The claim of "incompetence" is ludicrous.

http://www.tvnewslies.org/html/smoking_gun.html

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before

Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

One of the most important things to know about weapons is when not to use them.

Bush and Cheney never learned that.

Notice that the bushkultie won't be able to address
any of the facts from the above site at all.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at Midway, it was the work of Tiltman -- only a few weeks after it came into use in 1939."

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

Of course.

If it's electronic, it's no election.

Make a note of that.

It's significant.

It's undisputed.

The bushkultie can't address any of these issues.

The bushkultie has no facts.

The bushkultie has only lies.

It's obvious.

Yet the bushkultie isn't permitted to consider it.

I have a challenge for you sid. Catch a Greyhound to Houston,Texas.
Then rent a shiny new Escalade and slowly drive up and down the streets of the 5th ward till about 5 am. If you somehow are lucky enough to survive that then drive over the the East side of town to one of the dozens of crime ridden,rat infested barrios,park your Escalade in front of one of the many taco stands and just sit there,windows down,doors unlocked with the keys in the ignition. Good luck. Be sure and have your will up to date before you leave.
You poor,dumb useful idiot.

Silly boy. You must have flunked out of FUD-master 101. Obviously you are still very afraid of what William Mook and a few others have uncovered.

I see that you still quote dead people, perhaps because they can't refuse to support your perverted closed mindset. At least Hitler appreciated redneck folks like yourself.

Sid9's a retard.

He "thinks" that "local, state, and federal law enforcement agencies will protect..." us, when in fact, NONE of them are under any obligation to do so.
That retard also thinks "playing with guns" is a wise thing to do, and what normal people that have firearms do with them.

The links are obvious and almost everywhere. Hard to miss unless your head is always stuffed up some other mainstream status-quo butt. A basic search for Mook plus whatever topic, key word or catch phrase gives you everything you'll need.

Just because you FUD-masters are assigned to topic/author stalk myself and a few others shouldn't restrict other internet, Google Groups or Usenet access.

Agreed.

And, the cops are so busy doing their first priority as revenue

It's quite conceivable that crime in the areas most heavily inhabited by Mestizo invaders and Blacks is increasingly unreported.

"Law enforcement" there is often as corrupt as the criminals they're failing to apprehend, and neither of those racial groups are exactly forthcoming about reporting crimes, as they quite rationally fear interfacing with the System in any way.

In the Washington, Detroit, and Los Angeles areas, to mention only the ones I've personally heard about, there are _de facto_ "no-go" zones where gangs have much more authority and presence on the streets than the supposed "authorities," who are often nowhere to be found -- because of _their_ quite rational fears.

Welcome to Third World America, the result of the insane belief in an imaginary human equality which has never existed -- and which never can exist.

With every good wish,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

When the difference between life and death is a matter of seconds, the police will be there in minutes.

A couple of weeks ago, there was a woman who was attacked while she was taking a shower. She tried beating him with the shower rod, but that wasn't successful. The attacker dragged her to the bedroom where she had a 22. She unloaded 9 rounds into him. He was taken to the hospital where he died. [1]

The good news is that he didn't die with the first shot; when you are killing a perpetrator, you want him to know that he is going to die.

Nineteen is "teenage", but it's completely legal, so let's name the law he violated.

"Shouldn't be representing the public" and "committed a crime" aren't the same thing.

So, you never heard of civil disobediance? Oh no, you don't get to have it both ways. Democrats are always claiming that the marriage contract didn't matter. Were you in favor of Bill "Couldn't keep it in hs pants" resigning?

No, Gary; one must be TRIED by a jury or bench: indictment does not equal conviction ("found guilty").

IOW: the United States Department of Justice knew there was no case to pursue; despite your constant assertions.

We'll go with the USDoJ, rather than the "Vapid City Yoorghis IDIOT".

Post the "admission," Gary.

Prove it, Gary.

The USDoJ didn't seek an indictment because they knew that there was no case, Gary: prove otherwise or drop your false assertions.

There is no such place as Vapid City in South Dakota.I have been to South Dakota (and North Dakota too) before, so I reckon I Know.I bought my 1914 Ford Model T car in Sioux Falls,South Dakota in November 1971.In down town Yankton,South Dakota, I heard a loud Bang noise coming from the Ford U-Haul truck I rented to bring my Ford Model T home.It was only the aluminum ramp thingy that made that loud Bang noise, scared the sheet out of me! I thought my Model T car had fell out the back door of that U-Haul truck.

13 June 2011 @ 2100 UTC

First the 31m Shortwave Band 9.3~10 MHz had a Band Back-Ground Noise Level of S3~S5
-note- I could hear WWV strong at +10dB
but WWVH could not be heard on 10 MHz

While the Upper Shortwave Bands all had very low noise levels.
-usually-have-'some'-mid-day-band-noise-

The 25m Shortwave Band 11.6~12.2 MHz had a Band
Back-Ground Noise Level of below S"0" Zero

The 22m Shortwave Band 13.5~13.9 MHz had a Band
Back-Ground Noise Level of below S"0" Zero

The 19m Shortwave Band 15.1~15.8 MHz had a Band
Back-Ground Noise Level of below S"0" Zero
-note- I could hear a weak WWVH at S2~S4
but WWV could not be heard on 15 MHz

Checking the Lower Shortwave Bands all had very low noise levels too. -strange-indeed-
-usually-have-'a-lot-'-of--mid-day-band-noise-

The 41m Shortwave Band 7.1~7.6 MHz had a Band
Back-Ground Noise Level of near S"0" Zero

The 49m Shortwave Band 5.9~6.2 MHz had a Band
Back-Ground Noise Level of near S"0" Zero

The 60m Shortwave Band 4.7~5.1 MHz had a Band
Back-Ground Noise Level of right around S1
-note- I could NOT hear either WWV a/o WWVH on 5 MHz

Check the Bands with both Radio/Receivers

It has been officially a depression in my house since mid January 2011. That's when the job evaporated after a week, the week after my unemployment benefits ran out, it went from bad to full blown panic.

Not yet a "burn the women and rape the crops" kind of panic, but

31 meters is the best band for daytime during poor propagation conditions - and conditions are lousy. Upper bands are dead. However 41m thru 60m should improve a lot after dark.

The minimum age of consent for a sexual act (which this wasn't) in Delaware is 12. Complain to the Delaware legislature.

So again - name the law he violated. Not the personal feelings of some (or even all) people - which section of which penal code did he violate? If he didn't, he can't even be arrested. (There's a difference between an act that may be sick, or even depraved, and one that's illegal, and it's illegal that you were talking about.)

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Major Result on the Future of the 11-year Sunspot Cycle to be Announced
Source: Southwest Research InstitutePosted Friday, June 10, 2011

A major result on the future of the 11-year sunspot cycle will be announced at a news briefing on Tuesday, 14 June 2011, at 11 a.m. MDT (17:00 UTC) by scientists at the 2011 meeting of the Solar Physics Division (SPD) of the American Astronomical Society (AAS) in Las Cruces, New Mexico. Media are invited to attend the briefing in person or via media telecon.

AAS/SPD is holding its triennial standalone meeting 12-16 June 2011, hosted by New Mexico State University, at the Las Cruces convention center. AAS/SPD offers complimentary press registration to bona fide working journalists and public-information officers. For press registration, please contact the SPD press officer, Dr. Craig DeForest, with the subject line "SPD: PRESS REGISTRATION" as soon as possible.

For access to the media telecon, journalists should contact Dr. Craig DeForest, AAS/SPD press officer, by email at deforest@boulder.swri.edu with the subject line "SPD: SOLAR MEDIA TELECON". You will receive a confirmation email. Access instructions will be emailed out at 10 a.m. MDT (16:00 UTC) on Tuesday, 14 June.

Additional scientific highlights of the AAS/SPD meeting include prize and invited lectures on topics ranging from the solar cycle (Hale Prize lecture by Dr. Hendrik Spruit), through the connection between the solar interior and corona (Parker lecture by Dr. William Abbett), to the solar-stellar connection (Parker lecture by Dr. Marc Pinsonneault). Important topics include solar prominences (Parker lecture by Dr. Judy Karpen), suborbital manned experimentation for solar physics (special lecture by Dr. Alan Stern), an overview of spectacular new results from NASA's Solar Dynamics Observatory (invited talk by Dr. Dean Pesnell), and a special session on new results from the large solar telescope recently commissioned at the Big Bear Solar Observatory.

obama has not repaired any damage done by bush. obama has been using the same play book bush did ... different party, same chit.

If you liked bush, what is not to like about obama?

Well, that negros have been saying we owe them something, that is there has been a slave anywhere in their ancient ancestors, we need to pay them.

Looks to me like nothing has changed, same old chit, they are saying,

I mean come on, you should see that this is the correct thing to do.

Cats chit is sand, don't they? So, when negros and illegal invaders need some economic help, they are going to go "where the digging is easy." And, there are public servants with laws to help them legally steal your money ...

I think we can all see that.

Sorry, but the Bush Depression is over, Obama is not in change and the Depression occurring under his administration is his responsibility.

I know you don't like that since you prefer to blame everything on Republicans, but that's the reality of being a leader.. you're responsible because you're in charge.

Now if you would like to tell us that Obama isn't a leader......

you know what? Despite the pathetic running field of the right wing for the election, I actually hope the Republicans manage to run someone capable of beating Obama, and that they win. Then, when the economy REALLY goes to shit, it will be fun seeing how you try to

So you admit you have a double standard?

Actually it was his fault for those things he did, and his responsibility for those things he didn't. Just like it now is for Obama.

Of course, I don't expect you to ever accept that for anything that isn't good for Obama since you are incapable of holding a Democrat accountable but instead try to blame someone else for it.

I've come to realize that you have only one view, Democrat, and by that view
NO Democrat can do wrong or at least without blaming someone else for it.

That info is going back 3 years and discussing documents, you do realize

That article contains no proofs, no evidence, no experts who have

So, you're still pretending to be a 17 year old girl advertising for sex with a trio of German shepherd dogs? What about that teen chat room where you wanted sex with a nice black girl? You wanted blood spurting, if I recall. Then there's the matter of your bra wearing and desire for larger breasts. Got the appointment at the surgeon yet?

Do all the other 'Sane Right Wing Conservative Christians' think the way you do? I think so.

One of the most important things to know about weapons is when not to use them.

Bush and Cheney never learned that.

"congratulations for your willingness to look at the proof about 9-11"

http://www.911proof.com/

Notice that the bushkultie won't be able to address
any of the facts from the above site at all.

The bushkultie doesn't know much, and doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

"I would like to assure the world that I did not plan the recent attacks, which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons,"
bin Laden's statement said."

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

Notice that the bushkultie must ignore this fact, too.

Of course you hate America when you insist that those who murder Americans should not be prosecuted
according to the rule of law.

admissible evidence against the scapegoat chosen

The bushkultie has no admissible evidence, and doesn't even know what it is.

You always do.

The bushkultie doesn't believe in actual admissible evidence.

The bushworshipper is so uncivilized as to prefer
assassinations to trials.

It's not difficult to fool a bushkultie.

The bushworshipper has been tricked repeatedly.

The bushkultie is pitied, while a useful example.

The bushkultie is a mere dupe.

The bushworshipper was fooled easily by faked videos.

Others could see the discrepancies quite clearly.

The real perps were 'incompetent' all the way to their offshore accounts.

The claim of "incompetence" is ludicrous.

"...incompetence cannot explain the suppression of efforts to prevent the attacks."

Well this is EXACTLY what happened. The very people with established motives for conducting an event like the one that took place on 9/11/2001 were responsible for national security when we had that most unlikely, unrealistic and implausible complete catastrophic failure of every single defense procedure in operation."

http://www.tvnewslies.org/html/smoking_gun.html

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

http://www.army.mil/cmh-pg/brochures/pi/pi.htm

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to
"Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at Midway, it was the work of Tiltman -- only a few weeks after it came into use in 1939."

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

On August 8, 1945, after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Hoover wrote to Army and Navy Journal publisher Colonel John Callan O'Laughlin, "The use of the atomic bomb, with its indiscriminate killing of women and children, revolts my soul."
quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur,
"MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues, "When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

Scientists predict rare 'hibernation' of sunspots

Scientists predict rare hibernation of sunspots AFP/File

by Kerry Sheridan ï¿½ Tue Jun 14, 5:38 pm ET

WASHINGTON (AFP) ï¿½ For years, scientists have been predicting the Sun would by around 2012 move into solar maximum, a period of intense flares and sunspot activity, but lately a curious calm has suggested quite the opposite.

According to three studies released in the United States on Tuesday, experts believe the familiar sunspot cycle may be shutting down and heading toward a pattern of inactivity unseen since the 17th century.

The signs include a missing jet stream, fading spots, and slower activity near the poles, said experts from the National Solar Observatory and Air Force Research Laboratory.

"This is highly unusual and unexpected," said Frank Hill, associate director of the NSO's Solar Synoptic Network, as the findings of the three studies were presented at the annual meeting of the American Astronomical Society's Solar Physics Division in Las Cruces, New Mexico.

"But the fact that three completely different views of the Sun point in the same direction is a powerful indicator that the sunspot cycle may be going into hibernation."

Solar activity tends to rise and fall every 11 years or so. The solar maximum and solar minimum each mark about half the interval of the magnetic pole reversal on the Sun, which happens every 22 years.

Hill said the current cycle, number 24, "may be the last normal one for some time and the next one, cycle 25, may not happen for some time.

"This is important because the solar cycle causes space weather which affects modern technology and may contribute to climate change," he told reporters.

Experts are now probing whether this period of inactivity could be a second Maunder Minimum, which was a 70-year period when hardly any sunspots were observed between 1645-1715, a period known as the "Little Ice Age."

"If we are right, this could be the last solar maximum we'll see for a few decades. That would affect everything from space exploration to Earth's climate," said Hill.

Solar flares and eruptions can send highly charged particles hurtling toward Earth and interfere with satellite communications, GPS systems and even airline controls.

Geomagnetic forces have been known to occasionally garble the world's modern gadgetry, and warnings were issued as recently as last week when a moderate solar flare sent a coronal mass ejection in the Earth's direction.

The temperature change associated with any reduction in sunspot activity would likely be minimal and may not be enough to offset the impact of greenhouse gases on global warming, according to scientists who have published recent papers on the topic.

"Recent solar 11-year cycles are associated empirically with changes in global surface temperature of 0.1 Celsius," said Judith Lean, a solar physicist with the US Naval Research Laboratory.

If the cycle were to stop or slow down, the small fluctuation in temperature would do the same, eliminating the slightly cooler effect of a solar minimum compared to the warmer solar maximum. The phenomenon was witnessed during the descending phase of the last solar cycle.

This "cancelled part of the greenhouse gas warming of the period 2000-2008, causing the net global surface temperature to remain approximately flat -- and leading to the big debate of why the Earth hadn't (been) warming in the past decade," Lean, who was not involved in the three studies presented, said in an email to AFP.

A study in the March 2010 issue of Geophysical Research Letters explored what effect an extended solar minimum might have, and found no more than a 0.3 Celsius dip by 2100 compared to normal solar fluctuations.

"A new Maunder-type solar activity minimum cannot offset the global warming caused by human greenhouse gas emissions," wrote authors Georg Feulner and Stefan Rahmstorf, noting that forecasts by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change have found a range of 3.7 Celsius to 4.5 Celsius rise by this century's end compared to the latter half of the 20th century.

"Moreover, any offset of global warming due to a grand minimum of solar activity would be merely a temporary effect, since the distinct solar minima during the last millennium typically lasted for only several decades or a century at most."
